United States Acts and Prevents Killing of Madero

SAVED BY HIS WIFE'S PLEA

KNIFED BY 'CHIT,' SAID RANTOUL

When Edward L. Rantoul first suspected that the affection of his wife, Lois Burnett Rantoul, for his classmate and chumate, Chester C. ("Chi-Chet") Rumrill, was returned by Rumrill, Rantoul told Miss Elizabeth Quincy Huntington of Jamaica Plain about it and, in the telling, said to Miss Huntington:

"If I am suspicious, there must be some cause. But I never thought my best friend would knife me. This is striking in the dark, and I cannot believe it."

Rantoul said this to Miss Huntington at North Haven, Me. Rantoul was cruising up the Maine coast in Rumrill's yacht, the Adventuress, as Rumrill's guest, with the Eastern Yacht Club.

He came ashore at North Haven to tell his troubles to Miss Huntington, a neighbor of his wife's girlhood home in Jamaica Plain and one of her firm friends.

These are leading points in testimony given today by Miss Huntington when the Rantoul divorce case was resumed before Judge Hall at East Cambridge.

Rantoul's suspicions of Rumrill were aroused on the yacht, so he told Miss Huntington, when Rumrill asked Rantoul what he was doing when Rantoul happened to be rummaging in a drawer. Miss Huntington said:

"Mr. Rantoul said there must have been something there which he (Rumrill) didn't want him to see. It looked suspicious."

Miss Huntington told Rantoul flatly that she should think he would quit Rumrill's yacht. . . he had such suspicions. Rantoul told her he had a "great mind" to go home and ask his wife to explain it.

Found Her of "Wholesome Mind."

Miss Mary L. Hale, sister of Matthew Hale, and for six years living opposite the Rantoul home, testified of Mrs. Rantoul:

"I always found her mind wholesome."

Mrs Rantoul had told Miss Hale about the Rumrill affair.

Miss Mary C. Jarrett, agent for the Children's Aid Society, under whose direction Mrs. Rantoul did charitable and sociological work, following the Rumrill affair, testified that Mrs. Rantoul's work was "wonderfully intelligent."

Mrs. Rantoul also consoled in Miss Jarrett. The latter testified:

She told me of her marriage and that she never had received intelligent sympathy from her husband. But she said she had been fond of him and tried to be a good housekeeper, a good wife to him and a good mother to her children. She told me she had come to care for Rumrill and he had come to care for her and that she

Never Thought Best Friend Would Knife Me, Said Rantoul

Edward L. Rantoul told his suspicion that Mrs. Rantoul loved Chester Rumrill to Miss Huntington at North Haven, a Maine Summer resort. Among other things, Rantoul said to her:

"If I am suspicious, there must be some cause.

"But I never thought my best friend would knife me."

"Trot" as Danced at Palm Beach Is Proper, Says Mayor

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 21.—The turkey trot, a la Palm Beach, makes a tremendous hit with Mayor John F. Fitzgerald, of Boston.

He says:

"If Bostonians knew how to dance as they dance at Palm Beach, there would be no need of putting a ban on the turkey trot."

This opinion was given after His Honor had watched some of the best dancers here dancing on the porch of The Breakers to the provocative strains of "Robert E. Lee."

What the Mayor saw on the porch is best described in his own words:

It was a great novelty to me to watch the dancing at The Breakers porch, for 1,500 people were all seated at small tables sipping their favorite drinks when the band struck up "Robert E. Lee." With one accord all the "Turkey Trotters" jumped to their feet and started for a cleared space on the porch. Admirers of interesting spectators followed in their wake and climbed on chairs and the railings to view the animated scene from advantage point.

The dancing I have seen here is modest and refined and the newspaper reports have merely exaggerated a perfectly harmless amusement.

Crane to Ride With Wilson in Inaugural Line

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—After pondering deliberation, the joint congressional committee in charge of the inauguration today decided the question. "Who shall ride in President Wilson's carriage in the parade?"

Senators Crane of Massachusetts and Bacon of Georgia were the "winners." Crane was given a seat in the presidential barouche because he is chairman of the joint committee, and Bacon because he is the ranking Democrat.

Senator Overman of North Carolina and Representative Rucker of Missouri drew seats in Vice-President Marshall's parade vehicle.

School Teacher Team Driver in Lumber Strike

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Feb. 21.—Miss Eleanor M. Caldwell drove a heavy lumber team today to help her father, William T. Caldwell, foreman of the lumber yard of the Newell Coal & Lumber Company, whose drivers are on strike.

The firm is making every effort to fill orders. Even the rich Newell brothers, members of the firm, are driving coal wagons.

Early today Foreman Caldwell drove down to the New Haven freight yards with one lumber team. His daughter followed with a second team. Miss Caldwell is able to handle horses, and is loaned to help her father get his orders out.

Tomorrow Miss Caldwell will put in the holiday driving for her father. She is a teacher in the Central Avenue Grammar School.

SAY DORR BOUGHT THE GUN

The State produced further evidence today at Salem in its effort to show that the pistol found on the ocean in the Lynn marshes belonged to William A. Dorr, who is being tried for the murder of George E. Marsh.

District Attorney Attwill before a crowded courtroom called Walter R. Anthony, a gun expert, employed as chief shipping clerk for the Colt company. He testified that this automatic revolver was sold to the firm of Donovan & Carrigan in San Francisco on August 10, 1909.

Bernard Berlingen of Stockton, Cal., who worked in the hardware store of Rust & Doggett, had told of selling Dorr a thirty-two-calibre Colt automatic revolver on October 27, 1909. Berlingen produced his record book in which the sale was entered, showing that the pistol was No. 88491.

Dorr's diary also figured today in the trial. It was produced by the District Attorney as that a business partner of Dorr, Carnegi W. Brook of Stockton, Cal., might identify the handwriting.

The government claims that Dorr made an entry in this diary, "George Marsh is dead," tore a few leaves out and mailed them from New York sometime late on April 11, or early on April 12, to his aunt, Orpha Marsh, in California, before the body was found.

Brock testified that he thought the writing was Dorr's. He was shown other documents which he identified more positively. He stated that he was familiar with Dorr's handwriting because he kept Dorr's books when the accused man ran an automobile and motor cycle repair shop in Stockton.

Finding of the Pistol.

Joseph Karkowsky, a Polish barber of Lynn, testified that while searching for crabs on June 6 he found the pistol which contained a strip of five ball cartridges. He found the pistol when the tide was out near a bridge that spans the Saugus River, some distance from where the body of Marsh was found.

Mrs. Nellie O'Neil, who worked as a chambermaid in the lodging house at No. 11 School street, Lynn, testified that she found a rifle rammed in the room which Dorr had occupied last April. The witness, however, could not identify Dorr, as she had never seen him, but knew he had occupied that room.

The rammed was found the day after Dorr left, which was April 12. Marsh was shot to death late in the afternoon of April 11.

Berlingen's testimony had shown that his firm in Stockton had brought the revolver from the San Francisco house.

Anthony testified that he had been employed by the Colt company thirty years, and that a complete record was kept of every automatic revolver turned out. He said it was impossible to have a duplicate number on any weapon. If a pistol were found to be defective it was destroyed and the number of it was put on a new frame.

Mrs. Mary E. Leary, who keeps a lodging house at No. 11 Parrot street, testified that Dorr, whom she identified, hired a room from her on Monday, March 28. He got a room on the second floor, which overlooked the Marsh home, which was in the rear of Mrs. Leary's place. The government offered this line of testimony to establish its claim that Dorr had been lying in ambush for Marsh for some time.

Roomed Near Marsh Home.

Mrs. Leary's testimony in part was:

"I told him the room wouldn't be ready for two days. He came on Wednesday. His windows overlooked the Marsh barn. I did not learn until after he left that Mr. Marsh, the murdered man, lived on Ireson avenue, which is in back of our house. This man remained at my place until April 5. He told me he was a moving picture man. In the week he was in my house he occupied the bed only two nights. He paid in advance. On Thursday, April 4, he said he was going to Portland, Me., and if the room was vacant when he came back in two weeks he would hire it again."

On cross-examination Mrs. Leary said that she had not seen the defendant from April 4 until yesterday. She had talked with him in the corridor of her house and she said he had always acted very gentlemanly.

"His room was on the second floor was it?" asked Attorney Barney.

"It was," replied Mrs. Leary.

Q.—Could you see any part of the Marsh premises from the windows in that room? A.—All you could see was the back of the Marsh barn.

Mrs. Jennie L. York, who keeps a lodging house at No. 11 School street, Lynn, testified that Dorr, whom she identified positively, came to her place and hired a room April 4 in the afternoon. Title was right after he had left Mrs. Leary's place.

FOSS FOR BETTER HEALTH

Governor Foss, in a special message to the Legislature this afternoon, urged one, strong, centralized authority "for the protection of the Massachusetts workmen." He urged that this "centralized authority should have jurisdiction over the subject of industrial accidents, the compensation for injuries received, the enforcement of labor and factory inspection laws, and the installation of apparatus in shops and factories for the prevention of accidents."

In this connection the Governor recommended the consolidation of the Industrial Accident Board—which has charge of the operation of the workingmen's compensation act—with the new Board of Labor and Industries.

The message was in part:

As originally passed, the Industrial Accident Board was also to investigate and enforce measures for the prevention of industrial accidents.

It is obvious that no amount of compensation for injuries received can offset the economic loss to a community represented by the accidents themselves. Hence the prevention of accidents is, on an economic as well as a humanitarian basis, even more important than the compensation for injuries received.

However, no legislation was provided whereby the Industrial Accident Board could regulate and enforce the use of safety devices.

To meet the failure of previous legislation properly to ensure the enforcement of the labor laws and the factory inspection laws, the Board of Labor and Industries has now been created, its duties to begin on June 1, 1913.

With these two boards in operation, the authority of the State over the subject of industrial accidents and their prevention will be divided.

Thus far I have spoken mainly of the humanitarian considerations involved in this subject. But on both humanitarian and economic grounds it appears that the original intention of the Legislature can now be carried out more effectively and the industrial interests of the Commonwealth better safeguarded by combining these two boards.

Morgan Motors; Smokes Cigar on Hotel Veranda

CAIRO, Egypt, Feb. 21.—The condition of J. P. Morgan continues to show improvement. After a motor drive today Mr. Morgan sat upon the veranda of Shepherd's Hotel and chatted with several friends, while he smoked a cigar.

No verification could be obtained of a report cabled to New York yesterday that Mr. Morgan had suffered a slight attack of apoplexy.

Mr. Morgan is still upon a special diet and probably will be for several days longer.

Professor Giuseppe Bastinelli left Rome today for Egypt to attend J. Pierpont Morgan. It is understood the physician has been asked by Mr. Morgan to give him the benefit of his advice, although the financier is rapidly recovering from his attack of indigestion.

The AMERICAN will publish all of its editions, as usual, on Saturday, February 22.

TWO BOYS SAVED FROM DROWNING IN THE FENWAY

Two boys, who broke through the ice of Muddy River in the Fenway today, were rescued from drowning after they had gone down twice by employes of the Hugh Nawn Contracting Company. The boys were William Nason, 14, of No. 11 Palmer street, Roxbury, and John Smith, 12, of No. 107 Zeigler street, in the same district. Their rescuers were John Hall, a wire cutter, James McLaughin of No. 78 Phillips street, Roxbury, and William Skiffins of No. 19 Main street, Charlestown.

The scene of the accident was almost directly beneath the Beacon street bridge spanning Muddy River. Both boys were walking on the ice when it gave way, throwing Smith into the stream. Nason went to his assistance and broke through as well.

The shouts of the boys attracted the attention of the men, who hurried up bearing a long hook and life preserver. When they arrived Nason had a death grip on Smith and both were drawn out with considerable difficulty. They were taken to the City Hospital in the Ambulance from the Back Bay station, where it was found they were suffering from shock. Later both went home.

TAUNTON BOXER DIES OF INJURIES RECEIVED IN BOUT

TAUNTON, Feb. 21.—Albert Yelle, the lightweight boxer who was injured in a fight with "Young" Ritchie at Federal Hill, Providence, February 10, died today at his home on Clinton street as a result of his injuries.

TYPHOID VACCINATION URGED FOR MILITIA

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—In view of the remarkable results achieved from the use of the typhoid vaccination in the army, navy and civilian institutions, the War Department will urge and encourage the general use of the vaccine in all militia organizations.

Woman Locked in Room Dies in Roxbury Blaze

Mrs. Annie Colleron, aged sixty years, was found in her room on the second floor of No. 8 Parnell street today burned to death. Her body was found when the firemen broke down the door in seeking to put out the blaze. She had evidently tried to light her lamp with a paper taper. The lamp was upset and before help could reach her she was completely enveloped in the flames and burned to death.

The woman had locked the door, and it was impossible to get into the room until firemen broke the door down with their axes. Death resulted from burns and suffocation by smoke. The fire was put out quickly. The damage was $15.

TRIAL FOR DICTATOR ASSURED

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 21.—The life of Francisco I. Madero, the defeated dictator of Mexico, has been saved, temporarily at least, all through the heroic pleadings of his devoted wife.

Mrs. Madero begged on her knees that her husband be spared, but General Huerta, unfeeling and hardend by a life spent in warfare, was unmoved. Then she went to the diplomats of the foreign powers. It was United States Ambassador Wilson who proved the entering wedge that scattered the rebel victors vent on sanguinary vengeance.

Ultimatum to Mexico.

The American envoy was today instructed by the State Department at Washington to inform the provisional government that the United States would not tolerate the execution of Madero without a trial, and without cause.

Mr. Wilson was told to inform the new regime that while the United States cannot demand anything with respect to Mexican prisoners, the Mexican government must refrain from summary executions in the name of humanity.

He was also instructed to say that the United States will be unable to render any assistance, either financial or otherwise, if its wishes in this matter are not complied with.

STATE DEPARTMENT WARNS MEXICANS TO GIVE MADERO JUSTICE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—The United States government today sent warning on to provisional government in Mexico that it would not tolerate the summary execution of former President Francisco Madero without trial. A note to this effect was dispatched to Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson.

One dispatch from Mexico City says President Huerta gave to a correspondent the same assurance as to have been given to the American Ambassador that the life of Francisco Madero is safe and that he will not be harmed.

"The only consideration," said Huerta, "is to prevent Madero becoming a menace to the future peace of the country. There is no desire by the provisional government knew she had done wrong and had tried to put Rumrill out of her mind.

RANTOUL TOLD WOMAN OF HIS WIFE'S LOVE FOR HIS CHUM RUMRILL

The testimony of Miss Huntington, with its allusion to Rantoul thinking Rumrill had "knifed" him, added a new feature to a society divorce case already replete with sensations.

The "intellectual love" that Mrs. Rantoul entertained for Rumrill, her husband's classmate and chumate, was one novel expression brought out in this case.

That was followed by Dr. Hugh Cabot's testimony that this "intellectual love" was the result of a "mental enemum," which came to Mrs. Rantoul as result of the alleged cruelties and abuses by her husband.

Mrs. Rantoul sat in an ante room while court opened, but the door of the ante room was open, so that Judge Hall could see her and she could see the court, though not on view to the spectators.

Mrs. Elizabeth Quincy Huntington, today's opening witness, lives at No. 21 Glen road, Jamaica Plain. She has known Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul since the latter's girlhood.

Her testimony was doubly interesting in that it related to the first time Rantoul, so far as testimony has revealed, had any suspicions that Rumrill felt affection for Mrs. Rantoul, though he had suspected the state of Mrs. Rantoul's mind.

Rantoul was cruising up the Maine coast as a guest of Rumrill's yacht, the Adventuress, while Mrs. Rantoul was at the Rantoul home, "Elmwood," in Cambridge. This was in the Summer of 1911.

Miss Huntington said:

I was in North Haven, Maine in the Summer of 1911. The yacht Adventuress came in. Mr. Rantoul came ashore and saw me.

He talked with me on the Rumrill affair. He told me that Rumrill had been getting letters from Mrs. Rantoul.

He said he knew Rumrill was going ashore about every day to communicate by telegraph or telephone with Mrs. Rantoul.

New View of Rumrill Affair.

At no time in our conversation did he express any disappointment or sorrow about his suspicions. In fact, he went back aboard the yacht to finish the cruise.

Mr. Rantoul asked me my opinion on the things he had discovered as to going on during the cruise. I told him he was over-suspicious. He said: "If I am suspicious, there must be some cause. But I never thought my best friend would knife me."

He asked me if I thought his best friend would knife him. I told him I would not trust any man.

Miss Huntington testified that she had been very intimate with Mrs. Rantoul for four or five years before her marriage and since. Miss Huntington lives around the corner from the home in which Mrs. Rantoul now lives with her children. Her testimony corroborated in part Mrs. Rantoul's story, previously told, and introduced a new view of the Rumrill affair.

Miss Huntington's testimony served to fix the time that Mr. Rantoul's suspicions first became aroused that Rumrill, his best friend, was returning his wife's affections. She said:

I was very well acquainted with Mrs. Rantoul since four or five years before her marriage. Before her marriage she was always frank. She became more frail after her marriage. I have always noticed that she had difficulty after her marriage with her digestion. She was in bed a good deal.

I have noticed Mr. Rantoul's attitude toward Mrs. Rantoul's interest in books. He was always very contemptuous and sneering.

Before the Rumrill affair I had heard him make remarks about his disbelief in her illness. He never seemed to have any faith in her sickness. He was always passing it off as a joke. She had described to me in the four years before the Rumrill affair her husband's protests. She said that the abuse she was having was very painful.

Mrs. Rantoul never told me about Rumrill until after the Rumrill disclosure. I never had an opportunity to notice Mr. Rantoul's behavior when Rumrill was around.

I later met Mr. Rantoul at his request at the Exchange Club. We talked over the Rumrill affair. He objected at that time to Mrs. Rantoul's interest in the Children's Aid society work on the ground that she was devoting so much time to it that she was neglecting her own children.

I told him it was a good thing for her.

Mr. Rantoul did tell me that he wished his wife would die and say she was ashamed of what she had done. He told me that she had already expressed sorrow for the Rumrill affair, but he said that she must come and tell him that she was ashamed.

In April, 1912, I talked with Mrs. Rantoul's sister, Mrs. Stanley Cunningham, in the Brookline Fenway. We discussed the case.

Went Motoring With Rumrill.

Attorney Thomas Hunt then began his cross-examination of Miss Huntington.

Q.—You are an old friend of Mrs. Rantoul are you not? A.—I am.

Q.—A good friend? A.—I hope so.

Q.—Tell us what you have observed of her relations with Mr. Rumrill. I understood that they had been going around together. They had been autoing and had gone to dances together.

Q.—Did you receive any letters from Mrs. Rantoul during the Summer of 1911? A.—I did.

Q.—Have you preserved those letters? A.—I have not.

Q.—Do you recall writing to Mrs. Rantoul and remonstrating with her about her conduct with Mr. Rumrill? A.—I remember writing her, but I don't think I remonstrated with her. I recall writing that I was sorry she was going through what she was.

Q.—Did you approve or disapprove of her conduct? A.—I did neither. I wrote and that I thought that she ought to realize what she was doing.

Q.—Did you get an answer to this letter. A.—I did. She said that she hoped I treated her, that she was doing what she considered was right.

Promised to Stand by Her.

Q.—Do you recall writing to her and saying whatever you do I shall always stand by you? A.—I wrote that.

Q.—When do you recall first talking with Mrs. Rantoul about Mr. Rumrill? A.—As I remember it, it was in September, 1911, when we were at the Parker House together. We were alone.

Q.—Do you know Miss Harriet Rantoul? A.—I do.

Q.—In the Winter of 1912 did you meet her in Boston and discuss this affair with her? A.—Yes, I met her.

Q.—Did you say to her that you thought Lois ought not to go on with it? A.—I can't recall.

Q.—Did you say that Lois was too nice a girl to get mixed up with such a thing as that A.—I can't say positively.

Q.—Did you say that it was no use talking to Lois about it? A.—I don't remember.

Q.—Did you say the whole thing had come from philosophy? A.—I don't think I did. I said I thought it a pity that she had ever had lessons in philosophy.

Now, will you tell us all you can remember about the conference you had with Mr. Rantoul in July, 1911, in regard to this affair?

Told of Talk on Yacht.

This conference was at North Haven, Me., where Miss Huntington was spending the Summer. Mr. Rantoul was a guest on the yacht Adventuress, which was owned by Rumrill, and when she had anchored at North Haven with other boats from the Eastern Yacht Club, which was making its annual cruise.

Miss Huntington said in her testimony: "Mr. Rantoul brought up the subject. He said, 'I have come to see you and to see what you know. I have been cruising and I am all upset over this affair which has been going on. On the way down I know Rumrill was getting letters from Mrs. Rantoul'" Miss Huntington continued:

He said that one day downstairs in the cabin he started to look in a drawer. Rumrill came along and asked him what he was doing. Rummaging in his drawer. Mr. Rantoul said there must have been something there he didn't want him to see. It looked suspicious. Mr. Rantoul said that Rumrill always took the mail in the morning and that he never let anyone else see it. He also said that he thought Rumrill was telephoning and telegraphing to his wife. He said he couldn't believe a friend could go back on him in that way and stick a knife in him. He said, "This is striking me in the dark and I cannot believe it."

Q.—What did you say to him, asked Mr. Hunt. A.—I said that I wouldn't trust anyone.

Q.—What did Mr. Rantoul say to that? A.—He said if he thought it were so that he would leave the boat and go home. I said, "I should think you would." Mr. Rantoul then said, "I've decided to go home and ask her to explain it."

Q.—Did Mr. Rantoul tell you that his wife was writing to him every day? A.—Yes, he did.

Q.—Did you give him the benefit of any of your observations or advice? A.—I did not.

Rantoul Was Unhappy.

Q.—What was Mr. Rantoul's manner during this interview? A.—He seemed suspicious and unhappy at losing his friend. He seemed to be troubled and anxious.

Q.—Did you say to Mr. Rantoul that you would always stand by Lois? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you say to him, "What is a friend good for if she deserts in a time of trouble?" A.—I did.

Q.—You referred to yourself, of course? A.—I did.

Attorney Thompson broke in and asked the witness if she ever considered the possibility of deserting Mrs. Rantoul.

"Never," said the witness in a firm tone.

On redirect examination by Mr. Thompson, Miss Huntington stated that the Rumrill affair was a thing of the past, according to what Mrs. Rantoul had told her. Mrs. Rantoul said: "I have made every effort to put him out of my mind."

Nine-year-old Mary Sigsbee Kittelle, who christened the new "Lighter 23" at Charlestown Navy Yard, and who is named for her maternal grandpapa, Rear Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee, retired, says that, as long as she can't grow up to be a naval officer, she will marry one, as the next best thing. She is bound to get into the navy somehow.

"I am named after Grandpapa Sigsbee," said little Miss Mary today. "I would be a navy officer if I was a boy. I know how I am going to get into the navy. I'm going to marry a navy officer when I grow up, like my mamma did, or a man like dear old granddad."

Mary's idea is similar to that expressed in the popular song:

"I want a girl, just like the girl,
That married dear old Dad."

Only, in this case, Mary wants a navy man, just like the man her mamma married.

MARY SIGSBEE KITTELLE, granddaughter of Rear Admiral Sigsbee, who plans to marry a navy hero like her famous grandfather.

MADERO'S FATE STILL DEBATED BY HIS CAPTORS

to shed blood needlessly. We shall earnestly try to dispose of Madero justly and in the best interests of Mexico.

"If it seems wisest to exile him, that we will do. We would have showed him to leave had the public welfare not dictated his remaining here for the present.

"The organization of the new government is complete and successful. I shall now set myself to the task of pacifying the country."

More Trouble Is Expected.

That the new Cabinet will have a rocky road is admitted. There are many Maderists who have continuously remained loyal to the deposed President since Porfirio Diaz was overthrown, who will bide their time until a propitious moment for a counter revolution. Among the more vengeful there is already talk of an uprising. The government is ready to take action to nip in the bud any anti-Huerta revolution, and the most drastic methods will be employed. Experts have been set at work upon the books in the treasury.

It was reported that Madero's shortage, so far as known today, is about $3,500,000, but it will go much higher, according to anti-Maderists. This same element alleges to have been Gustavo Madero and not plain stealing. The chief members are alleged to have been Gustavo Madero and Juan Sanchez Azcona, private secretary to the President.

President Taft has received the following cable from Luis Manuel Rojas, grand master of the Freemasons of the Valley of Mexico:

"As a brother Mason, I beg you to intercede for the life of Francisco I. Madero."

Rojas also requested the Hearst newspapers to use their influence to intercede for Madero's life, saying he knew the rulers would take it unless a strong protest was made.

Believe Cabinet Hostile.

Francisco de la Barra, foreign minister in the new cabinet, who was on Madero's list of "those who ought to die," now sits in judgment on Madero, as do Manuel Mondragon, war minister and Diaz's commander, and Rodolfo Reyes, minister of justice, who holds Madero responsible for his father's death.

It is reported that only the intervention of Ambassador Wilson with General Huerta, saved the deposed president from being summarily shot to death as was his brother, Gustavo, and gained for him the promise of at least the semblance of a trial.

The charges of murder and theft of 6,000,000 pesos against Madero will be laid before the District Court, since President Huerta no longer has the authority to order a summary execution, as when he was military dictator. The trial will last for some months.

Madero is a mental and physical wreck. He has not slept for two nights; he is talking to himself almost constantly, and raves at times.

Pino Suarez, his vice-president, also a prisoner in the same room, is terror stricken. He fears death not so much at the hands of his captors, as by a mob, which he is afraid may wreak vengeance upon him.

GERMANY READY TO PROTECT INTERESTS OF SUBJECTS IN MEXICO

BERLIN, Feb. 21.—The Mexican situation came up for discussion in the Imperial Parliament today, when Gothein von Jagow the foreign minister, replied to an interpellation by the National Liberals as to what measures the Imperial Chancellor had taken for the protection of Germans in Mexico.

The minister said Germany had not sent any warships to Mexico, as the cruiser Bremen, the only vessel available, was on the way to Philadelphia from the Bermudas, to undergo repairs which could not be postponed.

Should it be learned, continued the minister, that German property had suffered during the outbreaks, the Imperial government would take steps to secure full compensation from Mexico.

Germany in general was committed to a policy of non-interference, as was customary in regard to the internal affairs of foreign States, but this would, said the Foreign Minister, not prevent her from standing up vigorously for the protection of German subjects.

NOW FOR FAST FINAL WEEK OF BIG CONTEST

Now for the final week!

The AMERICAN'S $40,000 contest will end at 10 p. m. next Friday night.

Wonders can be accomplished by active, earnest subscription effort in the remaining seven days.

Some candidates have been heard to say: "What's the use of working now? I can never catch up with the leaders for the $10,000 prize."

That's a mighty dangerous spirit to have at this stage of the big race. In the first place, you never can tell what you can do until you try. And then again, suppose you are unable to land the $10,000 prize? Is that any reason for allowing a $1,000 prize, or a $600 prize, or a $500 prize, or any of the other great gifts to slip through your fingers, when one week of hard work might obtain it for you?

Don't lose your courage. Don't give up until the clock strikes ten next Friday night.

Don't lose the results of your months of hard work by losing heart at the finish—with the prize goal almost within reach.

Crowd on steam, subscription-getting steam, and pile up a big vote in the next seven days.

A few Sunday AMERICAN subscriptions may make a big difference in your prize. Take no chances. Do your very best, day and night until the finish.

WANT SHIP TO SHOW GOODS OF NEW ENGLAND

The Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange through John J. Martin, its president, has asked Secretary of the Navy George von L. Meyer for the use of an army transport, as an exhibit ship for New England industries, to be sent to the principal ports of North America in the interests of trade relations.

The proposition, which has the backing of the Governors of New England, the Directors of the Port of Boston, the Home Market Club, the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, and the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange, is a plan to "follow up" the tour organized by the Boston Chamber of Commerce this Summer by an actual representation on board the ship, by the methods of manufacture used in the United States.

A HAPPY CHILD IN A FEW HOURS

When Cross, Sick, Feverish, Tongue Coated or Bilious, Give Delicious "Syrup of Figs."

Mother! look at the tongue! See if it is coated. If your child is listless, drooping, isn't sleeping well, is restless, doesn't eat heartily or is cross, irritable, out of sorts with everybody, stomach sour, feverish, breath fetid; has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, or is full of cold, it means the little one's stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels are filled with poisons and clogged up waste and need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

Give a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs, and in a few hours the foul, decaying constipated matter, undigested food and sour bile will gently move on and out of its little bowels without nausea, griping or weakness, and you will surely have a well and smiling child shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics it cannot be harmful, besides they dearly love its delicious taste.

Mothers should always keep Syrup of Figs handy. It is the only stomach, liver and bowel cleanser and regulator needed—a little given today will save a sick child tomorrow.

Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Co. This is the delicious tasting, genuine old reliable. Refuse anything else offered.

MAN DEAD IN FIRE RUINS AT YACHT CLUB

A man believed to be James Long of No. 400 Saratoga street, East Boston, was burned to death early today in a one-story building on the waterfront near Harbor View. Engine 11 of East Boston was called by a still alarm to the building, which was known as the Breakers Yacht Club. The body was burned beyond recognition.

Long was the last man in the building last night. He was seen there at 11 o'clock. He had not appeared at his home since 9 o'clock yesterday morning.

STILL ANOTHER BOSTONIAN GETS INSTANT RELIEF

Tona Vita Relieves After Many Years of Sickness

"When there is no pleasure in working, the appetite is gone and restful sleep is a thing of the past —you have Nervous Debility," said John Beazley Webb, the English nerve specialist. "Every day hundreds are using this great tonic in cases of this kind and their health is being restored thereby.

"I make it a habit to use plenty of formula from people who have derived benefit from Tona Vita. I also am particularly careful never to use such a statement more than once. Today I am selecting given me by S. M. Goldman, 23 Temple St., Boston, who stated.

"'For the past six months I have been a user of this remedy, Tona Vita. I keep it in the house all the time. It has benefited my brother, mother and myself. I have nothing but praise for it and would gladly recommend it in all cases of Nervous Debility.'

"Tona Vita is being handled by all the leading druggists in Boston," continued John Beazley Webb, "It is very good for preventing colds and often when one has contracted a cold it invigorates the body so that health can be regained quickly. The main action, however, lies in relieving victims of Nervous Debility, which has so many symptoms that it would be impossible to enumerate them all. In fact, any one of the following may denote the presence of the ailment: Slight difficulty in breathing, depression of spirits, dizziness, numbness in the limbs, bad breath, sense of fullness after eating, restless and broken sleep, or that run down feeling."

14 FACE COURT FOR GARMENT RIOTS; 2 FINED

Fourteen men, with their heads done up in bandages and with their faces covered with scars and bruises, were before Judge Barnes in the East Boston District Court today charged with taking part in the garment workers' strike riots in East Boston yesterday. They pleaded not guilty. Twelve cases were continued until Tuesday at the request of Attorney George E. Roewer, their counsel.

Patrick Carroll was fined $25 for assault and battery. Patrolman Greer testified that the man struck another man. Carroll said he was not a garment worker and denied striking anybody.

Edward Gunderson was fined $10 for disturbing the peace. Patrolman Houghton told the Judge that he was shouting "Scab" on Border street. The defendant said he hollered "Hello, Sidney," to a teamster friend, who was passing the scene of the rioting, but he didn't holler "Scab."

HEAD AND FACE FULL OF PIMPLES

Just Like Little Boils. Scratched Until They Bled. Face Disfigured. Itched and Burned. Used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. Well as Ever.

R. F. D. No. 3, Alburgh, Vt.—"Commencing I got up with my head and face full of pimples. They looked just like little boils.

The itching was so intense that I scratched until they bled and then they formed a scab and kept bleeding. The scabs were so bad that I had to have my hair clipped. My face was disfigured so that I was ashamed to go out, and oh! how it itched and burned. I hardly get any sleep for almost a year.

"I used all kinds of salves and most every kind of medicine that anyone would prescribe to me, but without relief. Finally one day a lady said to me, 'Why don't you try Cuticura Soap and Ointment?' As once I tried them, I began to wash the sores twice a day with the Cuticura Soap and applied the Cuticura Ointment on the sores and in just about two months there were no signs of scabs or no scars on my face or head, and my hair grew just lovely. I was as well as ever." (Signed) Mrs. Henry Laplerre, Nov. 1, 1912.

Why not have a clear skin, soft white hands, a clean scalp and good hair? It is your birthright. Cuticura Soap with an occasional use of Cuticura Ointment will bring about these coveted conditions in most cases when all else fails. Send every where. Sample of each free with 32-p. Skin Book. DOW ON STAND SAYS ACCOUNTS WERE HONEST

Stephen R. Dow, the mining promoter, on trial in the Superior Court for larceny of about $200,000, resumed his testimony in his own defence today.

His financial statements were handed to him for explanation. He testified:

"It is true that these statements were made by us, and signed by myself as well as by the treasurer, Mr. A. R. Bailey, but there is nothing in these statements that is not practically true. Representations are made of "cash on hand" of large amounts of money. Notes in business are called "cash" for purposes of bookkeeping, and every dollar represented in the statements was secured in the treasury by say notes, which were as good as cash.

"As to my statements to the public and to the stockholders as to the status of the business, I received the rolling reports from Mr. Edwards, the mining superintendent, and Mr. Bailey gave me the financial reports, and from those I made up the advertisements and circulars which went abroad.

"I never told Mr. Bailey how to make out his reports to me or to call notes cash. I received his reports in routine manner, and in good faith.

"These were auditors looking through the books and making audits. These auditors were appointed by the board of directors. I had nothing to do with them, never directed them, never had conversations with them, and was in no way a party to the making of their reports."

DIAMOND NECKLACE FAREWELL GIFT TO MRS. TAFT TONIGHT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—A set of pearl studs for President Taft and a diamond necklace of pure white stones for Mrs. Taft will be presented to them at the White House tonight, as farewell gifts from a circle of friends which the Tafts have made during their residence in the capitol.

The President and Mrs. Taft will give tonight their last formal entertainment at the White House, a dinner, to be followed by a musicale, at which presentations will be made then. Miss Mabel T. Boardman of the American Red Cross, and a leading spirit in raising the subscription fund for the purchase of the gifts, probably will make the formal presentation speech.

CHRISTIANS SLAIN BY HUNDREDS IN MOSLEM HOLY WAR

SOFIA, Feb. 21.—From several different quarters the Bulgarian government received reports today that the Turks are murdering Christians and committing unspeakable atrocities upon Christian families.

The Greek Catholic patriarch at Tchataija and the patriarch at Silivri both reported massacres by Mohammedans in which hundreds were slain. Slaughter of Christians also was reported from Ehi Erekli and Marouia.

Appeals are being made to the Bulgarian government to send troops into districts thickly populated by Christians.

ROSALIE JONES COLLAPSES ON SUFFRAGE 'HIKE'

NORTHEAST, Md., Feb. 21.—The suffragist hikers were in a state of almost utter exhaustion when they arrived here for the monday stop. The roads which they traveled from Elkton, Md., were the worst they have ever encountered, and it took some of them more than three hours to cover the six miles.

For the first time since the pilgrimage began, General Rosalie Jones suffered collapse. So exhausted was she that she was assisted into the hotel here, then she threw herself on the couch, refusing luncheon, turned her face to the wall and softly wept. Mrs. Wendt, the Albany reporcarrying hiker, was also in a critical condition, and many of the pilgrims pleaded with the little General to stop here for the night; but undaunted of their utmost tenderness, when the luncheon was over the exhausted leader ordered her suffering army onward to Havre de Grace, a distance of nine miles over roads that are almost knee-deep in mud.

There was fear as the army plodded onward that some of the hikers would never reach Havre de Grace tonight, and the newspaper correspondents organized hungry and miserable patrols along the route, ready to pick up the exhausted women. The roads were in good condition, however, they it was almost impossible to obtain progress in any sort of vehicle and the automobile carrying the luggage was stuck in the road for several hours between Elkton and this town, and it seemed that it would not be possible for the luggage to get the baggage to the pilgrims for use in Havre de Grace tonight.

There are in the ranks today some women who may suffer for the rest of their lives from the terrific strain they are undergoing. There are some women who are in such physical and nervous mental condition that to many it seemed like suicide for them to proceed farther on their journey.

And yet in that little army there is not one who will quit. No one who thinks and lives by another rule than the slogan of new and terrible meaning, "Washington, if it kills us."

"Corporal" Martha Klumpecker, who weighed ninety-eight pounds when the hike started and less now, collapsed a short time back, and on another occasion crawled nearly a mile on her hands and knees to reach the night's stop. Today, her face pinched and haggard, her pace slow, she merely dragged along on would a person lacking full control of limbs and brain.

Miss Elizabeth Aldrich, the San Diego, Cal., girl, today is in an almost hysterical condition. According to her own statement, she collapsed in her room a few nights ago and was in a raving hysterics for several hours. The feet of Miss Phoebe Hayes are raw and blistered, her ankles swollen and her knees twinge with pain at every movement.

Among the loyal "hikers" who have withstood the rigors of the march are Mrs. Freeman and Mrs. Boldt.

DUGAN HELD IN $1,000 BONDS FOR SHOOTING EVANS

Harrison Dugan, fifteen-year-old son of Mrs. Sarah E. Dugan, a widow, of No. 171 Pearl street, East Somerville, was today arraigned in the Somerville Police Court before Associate Justice Carroll on the charge of manslaughter in causing the Evans, seventeen years old, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred B. Evans of No. 6 Auburn street, East Somerville. Dugan pleaded not guilty. Edward Evans, while in a tallor shop last night.

His counsel, Edward P. Fitzgerald, told the court that he was ready to go on with the case. Captain Perry of the Somerville police informed the court that Dugan would be under the supervision of the law applied to juvenile cases, which makes it mandatory that the State Board of Charities be notified before a trial takes place. Judge Farrell continued the case till February 25 and held young Dugan in $1,000 bonds, which were cornbond. Francis Capozzi, eighteen years old, who witnessed the affair, was held in $100 as a witness.

HEARING GOES OVER IN HENRY RUSSELL INJUNCTION CASE

Henry Russell, director of the Boston Opera Company, accompanied by his attorney, Joseph Corey, appeared in equity session before Judge of the Suffolk Superior Court, today to urge the granting of an injunction against Dr. J. Kelly Gilbert, who has caused statements to be issued in a magazine that were of a nature injurious to the reputation of Russell and others employed at the Opera House.

Judge Hardy did not issue the injunction because of the absence of Kaha. He was in the Poor Debtor Court fighting a debtor suit brought by Miss Dannier and Louis Pokat, who are trying to recover a judgment of $54.15 for a debt and $5.82 as charges for the suit.

Judge Hardy refused to grant the injunction until pleadings by both sides had been completed. A date will be set for a hearing.

ANTHONY HOPE PLAY AT RADCLIFFE

The Idler Club of Radcliffe College today presented a play by Anthony Hope, entitled, "The Adventure of Lady Ursula." The committee in charge of the performance consisted of the Misses Susanna Wunderlich, Jane Clara Clark, '14, and Alice Duels, '15. This was the second "dramatic idler," and was attended largely by graduates, among whom were the Misses Alice Hunnewell, '11, and Esther Sidelinger, '12.

GUARD KING AND QUEEN FROM SUFFRAGETTES

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Elaborate precautions were taken today to guard King George and Queen Mary from suffragette attacks upon the occasion of the second court in Buckingham Palace.

Scotland Yard learned through secret channels that militant women of the Pankhurst group had planned to enter Buckingham Palace and make a demonstration during the court ceremonies.

A number of suffragettes were sentenced today for destruction of property. Sentences of six months were imposed upon Jane Short, Sarah Bennett and Clara Lambert. The Lambert woman had smashed the plate glass window in front of the Hamburg-American line office. Pleasance Pendred got four months for window breaking.

Legal advisers of the Home Office today began the consideration of a transcript of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst's Cardiff speech to ascertain if it gave grounds for criminal charges against her and other members of the Women's Social and Political Union. The part of the speech to which most serious consideration was given was the following:

"I have advised militant women, I have conspired with militant women and I have incited militant women.

The authorities need not look for the women who committed yesterday's deed; the dynamiting of Chancellor George's residence because I myself accept full responsibility for it.

Suffragette violence broke out in a number of places today, women having been sent from London, well supplied with money, to carry on the violence campaign.

Hundreds of letters were despatched to mail boxes in Battersea and at Ashford in Kent $1,000 damage was done by suffragettes who broke windows.

INVITE INDIANS TO INAUGURATION

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—A special invitation to attend the inauguration ceremonies March 4 was sent today by the Inauguration Committee to the twenty-five Indians now in New York attending the laying of a corner-stone for an Indian monument in New York instead if the Indians accept they will be invited with hoopla and given a special place in the procession.

SODALITY TO ATTEND MEMORIAL MASS

A solemn memorial mass for deceased members of the Young Men's Sodality of the Immaculate Conception Church, Harrison avenue, will be held on Sunday at 8 o'clock in the Sodality Chapel of Boston College. The mass will be followed by a breakfast in the upside room of the college.

MANICURE GIRL FINDS WEALTHY FIANCE HAS WIFE

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 21.—Miss Sallie Louise Smith, the pretty manicure girl at the Hotel Taft is in New York awaiting for Frank H. Hall, the college business man who announced his engagement to her and later sent her a telegram telling her he already has a wife. Miss Smith interrupted her preparations for the wedding and took the next train for New York. Her friends say her belligerent frame of mind when she departed means an interesting meeting.

One friend of Hall's here says he believes Hall proposed in good faith.

Here is the telegram Miss Smith received:

Am just leaving for Chicago with my wife. Am heartbroken. Can you forgive me?

Today her friends here declared themselves ready to help the popular young fiance and manicurist. The ranks a local military company at whose annual theatricals she recently played a star role, threatened to raid Hall's home if the young woman will give the order.

Hall, it is declared, had told Miss Smith he would marry her next week and take her to his orange farm in California. It was while she was packing out her wedding gown that she received Hall's wired confession.

Word came from New York to the effect that Hall was being sought at the Elks' Club there for a year. Members of the Elks' Club of New Haven declared they recalled having heard Hall speak of his wife while visiting in New Haven.

Hall's wife is believed to be wealthy, and whether she has taken her husband to Chicago or will face Miss Smith is a matter of keen interest here. Both Hall and Miss Smith have spent several hundred dollars in preparation for the wedding.

THREE WOMEN IN GROUP OF 93 NEW BARRISTERS TODAY

Three women were among the ninety-three candidates admitted to the Massachusetts bar today by Judge DeCourcy in the Supreme Court. They were Miss Mary J. Maher, Miss Mabel R. Somerend and Miss Charlotta A. Perkins.

After the seventy trial for admission Samuel A. Murray, who is fifty-nine years old, at last succeeded and was sworn in. He was congratulated by a number of friends on finally receiving the reward of his persistent efforts to achieve the barrister's dignity.

Former Senator George A. Schonfeld was among those admitted.

EARTH IN MOTION ALONG BIG DITCH

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21.—More than 2,000,000 cubic yards of earth and rock are in motion along the Panama Canal, and the slides are showing more than usual activity. This information was received from the canal zone today. In addition to the slides, there will involve additional work before the water is turned into the canal, there are 6,000,000 cubic yards of rock and excavation before the work is completed. Over along division of the water will be turned into the canal bed.

Dyspepsia Creates Queer Sensations

To Get Rid of that Bloated, Inflated Stomach Pressure Use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets After Eating.

Every sweet that sad-eyed man who tells you the earth is nothing but sin and sin! He is a dyspeptic. If he is not too far removed from advice and argument induce him to use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for a week. Watch the change. He will now appreciate a lump story he will go so far as to admit that some cooks are better than others; he will even accept an invitation to a banquet.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are made from the natural elements necessary to digestion, and when placed at work in the weak stomach soon enable the digestive glands in the organ to do their duty. They stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, waterbrash, insomnia, loss of appetite, unhealthy, constipation, dysentery and other kindred disorders, resulting from improper dissolution and assimilation of foods, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and a powerful remedy, that will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

Ask your druggist for a fifty-cent box.

MRS. CHASE BUSIEST NEW ENGLAND WOMAN, SAYS ANGELA MORGAN

Yesterday Angela Morgan told of Mrs. Margaret E. Chase, the humanitarian, who, with Hartley Dennett, goes about the village of Alstead, N. H., doing good. Today she describes the way Mrs. Chase lives and works and gives a day's schedule of work as accomplished by this, the hardest working woman in New England.

By ANGELA MORGAN.

Milking the cows, feeding the stock, planting the fields, tending the chickens, churning the butter, cooking the family meals, darning the children's stockings, dressing them for school, teaching them their lessons, teaching the neighbors and the neighbors' children, keeping the family order always well ordered, reading to the neighbors, tending the sick—well! It sounds like a page out of our grandmother's time, when women performed miracles of housewifery—the kind of work that makes the husbands of today demand of their modern wives: "What in the world do you do all day? Do you know what my grandmother used to accomplish?"

But this isn't a page out of grandmother's time, or mother's time, either. It's a plain statement of what is actually done by Margaret E. Chase, wife of Dr. Chase of Brookline, who, with her children and Hartley Dennett, is working out an ideal life in the village of East Alstead, N. H.

Do you think you could stand it—you housewives who think you have all you can do with the housework and your clubs and getting your children ready for school?

How would you like to stand out in the fields and get the ground ready for planting and with your own hands sow the seed for the crops, braving all sorts of weather, caring not for the baking sun or the whistling wind.

Could you haul water from the mill pond, and feed the stock, and carry milk pails, and all the rest?

Well, this is the life that Mrs. Chase cheerfully leads.

Her energy, her strength, her executive ability, are the marvel of the countryside. Even the farmers, accustomed to such toil, wonder how her woman's strength will stand such labor.

Scientific Farming.

"You never saw such enthusiastic farmers as Mrs. Chase and Mr. Dennett," one former told me. "And they do it scientifically, too. They're awfully set on having everything just right. The rows have to be mighty straight to please them. Mrs. Chase gets down on her knees and searches those rows just as close, wanting to get them strictly even. They've got to be just so."

Another farmer said: "One day I saw her hauling water from the mill pond for the stock. That was before the water was brought to their barn as it is now. Well, if she didn't go do it just like a man. And she didn't look a bit tired—but went right on as if she hadn't no more than said how d'ye-do to a neighbor. That's her—she don't ever take anything hard."

The Chase farmhouse is a red brick structure, standing high on a hill. The barn is some distance from it, on the place. In this barn are sheltered a horse, two sheep, two lambs, two cows, two calves and a pretty steer. There are a flock of chickens that receive attention daily.

Mrs. Chase goes about her duties with calmness and practical sense. She never hurries unduly, and aims to keep poised over everything, even the most annoying disappointments.

Her rule of work is: "Do the very best you possibly can. Then accept what comes. Never worry. Never grieve over failure to do all you planned that hour or that day. Keep calm and happy."

Here is a schedule of her day's work:

MORNING.

1—Rises at 5 o'clock every morning. Dons her bloomers, which she thinks form the only practical working garb.
2—Feeds the cows and the horse.
3—Gets the children ready for school.
4—Prepares breakfast for the family.
5—Cleans things away and washes dishes.
6—Works in the field and about the place.
7—Churns the butter.
8—Sews.
9—Bakes.

NOON.

10—If there are guests she serves lunch. If not, she does not eat a noon meal, it being her rule to eat only two meals a day.
11—Teaches classes in cooking and sewing.
12—Reads to the neighbors.
13—Sews.
14—PARTY NAP—This is a great point with Mrs. Chase—her afternoon nap. Without it she could not accomplish the tremendous amount of work she attempts and accomplishes.
15—Is ready to greet her children when they come from school. Reads to them and helps them with their lessons.
16—Gets supper on nights when its cake day her. Looks after the milking, and feeds the stock again.

NIGHT.

17—Reads and has quiet hour with her children or with the neighbors.
18—Early to bed.

This schedule, of course, varies with the season of the year. In planting time there is more to do, and she hires a man to help with this.

Meanwhile, I have neglected to tell of Hartley Dennett's labors. In all the work he has his share, for his love for farming is fully as great as that of his co-worker.

Hartley Dennett is to be seen constantly helping and advising and putting his shoulder to the wheel. He and Mrs. Chase study the same books on agriculture, read the same farm journals and talk constantly of newer and better ways to accomplish the work of the farm.

Plenty of Recreation.

Mr. Dennett is interested in the deepest scientific sense, as he has had special education for it, and plans to make it a life work. Mrs. Chase also studies the entire matter from the scientific as well as the practical side.

Recreation? Mrs. Chase declares she has plenty of it. There are long walks in the country and drives, or, when snow comes, there are sleighing parties. And then she is always keeping open house to the village.

What is the secret of her achievements?

"Love," replies Mrs. Chase. "Love for the life of a farm. Ever since I was a child I have loved it. I am carrying out a dream of my earliest childhood."

Every once in a while, some modern physician rises and cries out for a return to the good old days, when women "really worked and knew how to make their households a success."

"If women of the present would work as their grandmother did, the ills of modern life would be a thing of the past," declared a prominent physician recently. "We would have healthy girls and healthy women and healthy children. That is what we need—the return to the days of our grandmothers."

Mrs. Chase has started the return. She is blazing the way, and who knows how many nerve-worn, unhappy, dyspeptic women tired of highheeled shoes and tight laces, may follow in that path?

(Tomorrow Angela Morgan will tell of Mrs. Chase, the state's graduate, the trained professional worker, whose "career" as she originally planned it was short when she became engaged to marry Dr. Chase.)

CURES RHEUMATISM

Quickly Eases Stiff, Sore, Swollen Joints and Muscles—Drives Rheumatic Pains Away

It is needless to suffer any longer with rheumatism, and to be crippled up and bent out of shape with its heart-wrenching pains, when you can easily avoid it.

Rheumatism comes from weak, inactive kidneys, that fail to filter from the blood the poisonous waste matter and uric acid; and it is useless to rub on liniments or take ordinary remedies to relieve the pain. This only prolongs the misery and can't possibly cure you.

The only way to cure rheumatism is to remove the cause. The new discovery, Croxone, does this, because it neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous substances and uric acid that lodge in the joints and muscles, to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism, and drives out and strengthens the stopped-up, inactive kidneys, so they can filter the poison from the blood and drive it out and out of the system.

Croxone is the most wonderful medicine ever made for curing chronic rheumatism, kidney troubles and bladder disorders. You will find it different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth like it. It matters not how old you are, or how long you have suffered, it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. You will find relief from the first few doses, and you will be surprised how quickly all your misery and suffering will end.

An original package of Croxone costs but a trifle at any first-class drug store. All druggists are authorized to sell it on a positive money-back guarantee. Three doses a day for a few days is often all that is ever needed to cure the worst backache or overcome urinary disorders.

A WARNING TO MANY

Some Interesting Facts Regarding Health Statistics

Few people realize to what extent their health depends upon the condition of the kidneys.

The physician in nearly all cases of serious illness, makes a chemical analysis of the patient's urine. He knows that unless the kidneys are doing their work properly, the other organs cannot be brought back to health and strength.

When the kidneys are neglected or abused in any way, serious results are sure to follow. According to health statistics, Bright's disease, which is really an advanced form of kidney trouble, caused nearly ten thousand deaths in 1910, in the State of New York alone. Therefore, it behooves us to pay more attention to the health of these most important organs.

An ideal herbal compound that has had remarkable success as a kidney remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy.

The mild and healing influence of this preparation is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of cures.

If you feel that your kidneys require attention, and wish a sample bottle, write to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Mention this paper and they will gladly forward it to you absolutely free, by mail.

Swamp-Root is sold by every druggist in bottles of two sizes—50c. and $1.00.

ITCHING, CRUSTED ECZEMA IS CURED

By a Single Jar of Resinol After Many Remedies Had Failed.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 27, 1912.—"It would be very wrong not to tell you what Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap have done for us. My baby boy was born with a rough skin. It kept getting worse all the time. It became a weeping eczema and at times a thick crust would form. He would cry and itch most all the time. I cannot tell you all the remedies and salves I used before I sent for Resinol samples.

"At once I washed him with Resinol Soap and put on Resinol Ointment. He slept for three hours. When he awoke I washed him again and, like a miracle, the scabs dropped off and have never returned. You would not have known him. Then I got Resinol Soap and a large jar of Ointment, but before it was all used, baby was well. I would not be without Resinol Ointment and Soap. I have recommended them to all my friends." (Signed) Mrs. Katie Markert, 170 Ralph Street.

If you or any of your family are suffering from eczema, rash, tetter, ringworm, or other itching, burning skin eruption, there is only one Resinol proof of the value of Resinol. That is, try it yourself and see! You can buy Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap at any druggist's, or can get samples free by writing to Dept. 5-T, Resinol Chem. Co., Baltimore, Md. Resinol stops itching instantly. Prescribed by careful doctors for eighteen years.

Have Color In Your Cheeks —Be Better Looking— Try Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

These Olive Tablets oil the bowels—yet have no oily taste. They are a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil.

If you want a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy and energy, you must get at the cause. Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after-effects. They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box.

Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results.

MISS LOUISE LANGDON, Boston actress who won bride for her grandfather and now takes out marriage license for her own wedding to a Brockton physician.

Cambridge friends of Miss Louise Langdon, the Boston actress who recently won a bride for her aged grandfather, a wealthy Cambridge manufacturer, were interested today in the news that the pretty ingenue has a romance all her own. With Dr. Philip P. Crimmins a well-known Brockton physician, she went to the City Hall in that city and took out a license to wed. It came to light that the young woman player's own romance started in the same Brockton theatre in which she introduced her grandfather to the Brockton woman who is now his bride.

Miss Langdon is to be married to Dr. Crimmins within a week. Then they will leave for Europe on their honeymoon. Her romance began two years ago when she was a member of a Brockton stock company. Dr. Crimmins fell in love with her, sought an introduction and obtained it. A little later Miss Langdon introduced her grandfather to a woman friend of hers. The grandfather also fell in love and was married several months ago. Miss Langdon is twenty years of age. Dr. Crimmins is twenty-eight.

WHAT IS GOOD TO EAT IN THE MARKET TODAY

Today the fish markets of Greater Boston are doing business under something like normal conditions for the first time since the beginning of Lent. For two or three days the fishing vessels have been bringing in good fares, and during the past week the prices have fallen correspondingly. The wholesale prices yesterday were as follows: Steak cod, 7½; market cod, 4½; haddock, 4½ to 7½; pollock, 7; hake, 5½ to 7½; cusk, 4½. The retail prices on fresh fish today range from 10 to 15 cents a pound.

The prices of fancy fish remain about the same, bluefish selling at retail for 30 cents a pound, striped bass for 40, halibut for 30, sword salmon for 35, pickerel for 25, jack shad for 20, roe shad for 20 and smelts for 25 to 40.

Turkeys are scarce. There have been no northern turkeys offered for sale in Boston for several weeks, and the western birds command high prices, 25 cents a pound being asked for fair turkeys. Other poultry is fairly plentiful and sells for practically the same prices that have prevailed for several weeks.

Strawberries, which sold for 25 and 30 cents a box two weeks ago, are now selling for 40 and 50 cents. Hothouse tomatoes, comparatively about 25 cents a pound, sell today for 50 to 65 cents. Good pineapples sell for 25 cents and Malaga grapes for 40 cents a pound.

Lamb is higher than it has been since 1910, and there seems to be no immediate prospect of its becoming cheaper. Leg and loins sell for 22 cents and forequarters for 16 cents, an advance of four or five cents a pound since midwinter.

The egg market has been on the downward slope for several days. Fancy hennery eggs can be bought as low as 36 cents at retail and fresh laid western eggs for 28 cents in some of the markets. Storage eggs are selling for 23 to 25 cents a dozen for good quality eggs.

The tomorrow warehouse magnates seem to have a firm grasp on the butter situation. Although there is an abundance of butter on hand, the price remains firm.

There has been an advance of about five cents a bushel on the wholesale price of potatoes during the past week, the quotation today being $1.35 and $1.40 per bag of two bushels. They retail at 25 and 30 cents a peck.

QUERY MELLEN RIGHT TO SPEND HILL TOWN CASH

That low, muffled sound, as of somebody locked in a trunk, comes from the State House.

It is the cry of the Sanborn order, pigeon-holed in the Committee on Rules.

The Sanborn order was introduced by Representative John G. Stevens of Marshfield, Democrat.

It calls for an inquiry by the committee on Street Railways into the charge by the AMERICAN that the Hill Towns Transit Association, organized with brass hands, red fire and press agents, is conspiring the Legislature that the New Haven Railroad should be allowed to take up the trolley business of Massachusetts, was financed by the Mellen railroad.

When the order came up in the House yesterday it was met with Joint Rule #1144, which provides that orders for JOINT Committee on Rules; that is, the House Committee on Rules and the Senate Committee on Rules, sitting as one.

The Committee on Rules is the "Buss" committee of either branch.

"House Rules" is Speaker Cushing's cabinet.

"Senate Rules" is President Green's business, confidently about 25 cents a pound, sell today for 50 to 65 cents. Good pineapples sell for 25 cents and Malaga grapes for 40 cents a pound.

Lamb is higher than it has been since 1910, and there seems to be no immediate prospect of its becoming cheaper. Leg and loins sell for 22 cents and forequarters for 16 cents, an advance of four or five cents a pound since midwinter.

The egg market has been on the downward slope for several days. Fancy hennery eggs can be bought as low as 36 cents at retail and fresh laid western eggs for 28 cents in some of the markets. Storage eggs are selling for 23 to 25 cents a dozen for good quality eggs.

Those who do not want investigation of the New Haven's backing of the Hill Town movement, with its pathetic "Prayer from the Hills," all take the same general attitude:

"What of it?"

They mean what of it if the New Haven did put up the coin.

And this is what of it:

The Hill Towns movement of a year ago, which moved a Legislature to forget the policy of Massachusetts with respect to keeping the steam railroads out of the trolley business, purported to be a bona fide movement.

Until the mask was torn away, there was apparently no sign that the New Haven was there, "putting up the money."

Now it is known that the Hill Towns Transit Association and the New Haven crowd were one and the same; or, if not that, members of the same club.

And there is, moreover, attorneys say, a serious question of the right of President Mellen to sanction the expenditure of New Haven funds for the Hill Towns Transit Association.

The Republican State Committee reaches a decision today at a meeting with the Joint Committee on Rules at the State House.

ABANDON HOPE OF HUDSON ICE CROP

HUDSON, N. Y., Feb. 21.—Hope of an ice harvest here has been practically abandoned. The local ice houses are only a third full, and the larger ones have practically cut no ice. At Greenport and Castleton less than 100,000 tons have been harvested, and one Kinderkerbocker home at Athens has a few thousand tons. The ice opposite this city has wasted to five inches, losing one inch today.

HAIR STOPS FALLING, DANDRUFF DISAPPEARS---25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Save your Hair! Beautify it! Invigorate your scalp! Danderine grows hair and we can prove it.

Try as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine now will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all.

AT ONCE! CLOGGED NOSTRILS OPEN, HEAD COLDS AND CATARRH VANISH

Breathe Freely! Clears Stuffed-up, Inflamed Nose and Head and Stops Catarrhal Discharge. Cures Dull Headache.

Try "Ely's Cream Balm."

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—Apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; relieves the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of unending, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lie awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, its mucus dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.

FOSS AND WALSH WILLING TO HEAR KING PLEA AGAIN

If any of the members of the Governor's Council feel favorable to reopening the matter of a pardon for Cardenio F. Klag, Governor Foss and Lieutenant-Governor Walsh will not oppose. The Governor and Lieutenant-Governor agree a conditional pardon or parole would be justifiable.

Out of courtesy to the Council, the Governor feels Lieutenant-Governor Walsh is constrained from initiating a new movement for a pardon unless assured some one of the five opposing members of the Council wish to reopen the case. Lieutenant-Governor Walsh said:

I believe King should be pardoned, or rather, paroled, so he may be given opportunity to regain his health. But I feel that, under no circumstances should he, if pardoned, be permitted to re-engage in business.

I should favor reopening the case if at any time it appears that there has been a change of attitude on the part of the members who oppose the pardon.

GALLANT OUT TO BEAT DOHAN IN BOUT TONIGHT

By JACK CONWAY.

GILBERT GALLANT, the rugged lightweight from Chelsea, will have his work cut out for him when he clashes with Johnny Dohan of New York in a twelve round bout at Lowell tonight. It should be a whirlwind battle from start to finish.

Dohan has been fighting in the welterweight class during the past year. The majority of his tussles have been at 145 pounds but he has agreed to make 139 pounds ringside for Gallant. This will give him an advantage of about five pounds on Gallant who never weighs more than 133 or 134 pounds.

Alex McLean's protege has been forced to go over all his rivals or else remain idle. There is not a man of his weight in New England who is over anxious to meet him. Gilbert, however, is a very strong boy and he is able to give away five or six pounds and still be able to humble the average boxer.

* * *

NEW ENGLAND fight "fans" are displaying a great deal of interest in the Wolgast-Murphy and the Rivers-Brown twenty round battles which take place on the coast tomorrow. Wolgast will probably enter the ring a 10 to 8 or a 10 to 7 choice over Murphy while Rivers is being backed to whip Brown at odds of 10 to 6 and the chances are that the betting will be 2 to 1 with the Mexican the favorite by the time that the men enter the ring.

Wolgast, although defeated by Willie Ritchie, is still a grand fighter and can not be considered lightly. Any lad who can hit as hard as Ad and who is as game as he is has the ability to defeat many a contender for the title. Then, too, Murphy is a veteran and, if anything, is in poorer physical condition than the former lightweight king.

Rivers should not experience a great deal of difficulty in winning from Brown. The Mexican has proved his class time and again and the only chance that the blonde-haired Dutchman from New York has of capturing the premier laurels is by landing a chance knockout punch.

Ad Wolgast Must Defeat Murphy or Quit the Ring

By W. W. NAUGHTON

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21.—Ad Wolgast is training as he never trained before for his Duly City bout with Harlem Tommy Murphy tomorrow. He is taking the coming contest with the proper degree of seriousness. The instant Ad closed the bargain with Promoter Tim Coffroth over the long-distance phone he began his preparation for his tussle with the sturdy lad from Harlem. Road work entered largely into Wolgast's exercises and he boxed with every available man in Portland, irrespective of weight.

When Wolgast answers the gong in Coffroth's arena on Washington's Birthday memories of a former birthday will flit across his mind. It will be the anniversary of his memorable fight with Battling Nelson at Richmond.

It was on February 22, 1910, that Ad relieved the Durable Dane of the lightweight championship title. While he has forfeited the right to defend the championship Wolgast feels that he has not lost caste in the world of sport. He is confident of his ability to defeat Murphy and believes that a victory over the Easterner will hasten the day of reckoning with Willie Ritchie.

February has certainly been an eventful month in Wolgast's career. To begin with, he was born in February, 1888. In 1907, while he was still comparatively new to the fighting game, he boxed three matches in February, winning from Gene McGovern and Young Kilrain and sharing a draw decision with Jack Nelson.

In February, 1908, he won from Harry Baker at Milwaukee. In February, 1909, at Los Angles, he won from Danny Webster and knocked out Walter Little. It was on February 22 of the following year that he wrested the championship from Battling Nelson, while February 8, 1911, saw him engaged with Knockout Brown in Philadelphia, the distance being six rounds and no decision being rendered.

In the February following Wolgast was recuperating from an operation for appendicitis and was not able to celebrate in the usual way, but his match with Murphy marks the restoration of February to Ad's fistic calendar. Possibly what makes him partial to February is the fact that he has never lost a fight in the month named.

KAYO CONFIDENT OF HOLDING RIVERS SAFE

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 21.—"Kayo" big struggle, and it will be no fault of Brown and Joe Rivers went through their paces if they are not in the best of trim by Washington's Birthday.

Fully two thousand fight fans made the trip to the Mexican's camp at Vernon to witness his work, and were rewarded by seeing him go through his stunts with the old-time vim and vigor.

Joe looked like a new boxer. He seemed eager for the work, and wasted into his sparring partners as though he had a real grudge against them.

"Kayo" Brown's manager, "Dumb Dan" Morgan, sent a wire to his Eastern friends today, telling them to put up the family jewels and plate on the Dutchman to grub the decision tomorrow, as his protege is fit and ready for the battle of his career.

The New Yorker went nine rounds with his sparring partners, and Morgan says it was the best showing he has made in his entire career. He took on "Solly" Burns for a three-round set-to, went over the same route with "Kid" Yoakum and took on "Young" Marino for another three, handling them as though he was just out for an appetizer.

"Solly" Burns, who is to box the semi-windup event with "Babe" Pirotto, is giving Brown just the kind of training he needs for his bout, and in their three-round sparring try both Burns and Brown suited right in and had it on tooth and nail.

The Venice camp at Peters' gymnasium was well filled for the workout, as the fans were anxious to see how Brown would stack up with Burns.

HARVARD NAMES DATES FOR BIG FOOTBALL GAMES

The schedules for the Harvard varsity and freshmen football teams have been officially announced by the athletic committee. The schedule for the varsity eleven has been known for several weeks but this is the first official announcement which has been made. The varsity team's schedule is as follows:

September 27. University of Maine.
October 4. Bates.
October 11. Williams.
October 18. Holy Cross.
October 25. Dartmouth.
November 1. Cornell.
November 8. Princeton at Princeton.
November 15. Brown.
November 22. Yale.

No action has yet been taken in regard to the coaching of the team. Percy Haughton has not yet stated that he will be at the helm directing the destiny of the Harvard eleven next Fall.

The freshmen will have two new games with the Hill's School and the Cornell freshmen. The schedule is:

October 4, open; October 8, Groton at Groton; October 11, Deas Academy, October 18, Andover at Andover; October 25, Exeter; November 1, Hill School at Pottstown; November 8, Cornell, 1917; November 15, Yale, 1917.

The varsity is cross-schedule was accepted and is as follows:

April 5, Hartford La Crosse Club; April 12, Mt. Washington Club, at Mt. Washington, Md.; April 14, Maryland Agricultural College at College Park, Md.; April 16, Johns Hopkins at Baltimore, Md.; April 19, Johns Hopkins at Homewood, Md.; April 26, Boston Cricket Club; May 3, Knickerbocker Athletic Club; May 10, Rutgers at Geneva, N. Y.; May 24, Cornell at Ithaca; May 17, open.

It was also announced that Captain Cummings and Manager Tufts of the Harvard track team would confer with the Yale track management today at New York to consider inviting Cambridge and Oxford track teams to compete here next June.

Bill Sweeney Back in Boston, Talks of Pennant Race

A person who thinks favorably of the Pilgrims' chances in this year's pennant race has at last been discovered. The name of this individual is William Sweeney. Ever hear of him before? Of course you have. Sure enough, it is plain Bill, the clever infielder and hard hitting second sacker of Stallings' Infield.

Yes, William is in our midst again. He arrived in town yesterday accompanied by Mrs. Sweeney and William J., Jr. The latter is but six months old and so did not bother to tell us what he thought of baseball in general and the Boston Nationals in particular.

Sweeney says that the Pilgrims have a good chance to best out St. Louis, Brooklyn and possibly Chicago.

MARCEAU TO RUN.

Manager George Y. Brown of the B. A. A. announces that in addition to Tom Halpin and Oscar Hedlund, Gene Marceau will represent the B. A. A. at the Emmett Guards' meet at Worcester on Monday night.

500 Track Men In Providence Armory Games

TOM HALPIN

By T. J. HALPIN

Providence will have one of the largest indoor meets conducted in New England this Winter. Saturday, when nearly 500 athletes will compete in the fifth annual meet of the Armory Athletic Association, which will take place in the State armory.

The Boston Athletic Association will find worthy opponents for its track team in the various representatives entered from Brown, Harvard, Tech and other colleges and clubs throughout New England.

Hard Task for Unicorn.

The chief event of interest will be the Worcester Polytechnic and B. A. A. relay race. The Unicorn team will give the Worcester men a start of sixty yards and as the total distance is far less than a mile, an interesting race should result. Worcester has a fine combination of quarter-milers, and, although the men are not as fast as the B. A. A. fliers, the Back Bay club, in allowing them sixty yards, will concede them a handicap equal to seven seconds. Each man is to run 352 yards and the wearers of the Unicorn will have their work cut out for them.

The forty-yard dash will bring together the best New Englanders, who will meet Frank Stephenson, the fleet New Yorker who recently won the forty-yard scratch race at the B. A. A. games. It is regretted that Drew will not start in this race at the B. A. A. games. It is regretted that Drew will not start in this race, as the colored flier from Springfield would give any man in the world a race over the short route. Stephenson has been coming right along during the past two months, however, and he should be heard from in this race, in which he will start from scratch.

Oscar Hedlund will occupy the mark of honor in the mile run, while Talse has been given ten yards. Powers has sixteen yards on the fleet miler from the B. A. A. Hedlund should win this event, as he is traveling in rare style, as is evidenced by his mark of 4m. 18 4-5s at the New York A. C. games.

Harvard Stars to Compete.

Harvard has entered its full track team and is especially strong in the hurdles and in the high jump. In this event we find Johnstone on scratch, while Barwise, who has been clearing six feet, is given half an inch. These two rumors will have to fight it out, as Barwise threatens to defeat the Harvard star for first honors.

There are thirty-eight starters in the half-mile run and this should narrow down to a contest between some of the limit men, although E. Marceau, who has been granted eight yards, will surely place, and if he is able to fight his way through the large field he will come home a winner, for the former Tech star is running the best in his career.

The Boston team will leave on a special car for the games and will be accompanied by several members of the athletic committee.

BIG POLE GIVES TIME AIDING HIS INJURED RIVAL

George Lurich, who unfortunately pulled a tendon in his forearm in a wrestling match with Stanislaus Zbyszko at Mechanics Hall, said today that his injury had improved, although it was still causing him much pain.

Among the early arrivals at his room this morning was Zbyszko, his rival, who spent some time in comforting his injured rival. Other visitors were Promoter Toohey, Jack Herman, Zbyszko's manager, and Karl Lemle, the Bohemian wrestler.

After a brief conversation with Lurich, through an interpreter, Mr. Toohey said while the injury was a painful one, it would heal up quickly, and the great Russian grappler would be ready for work in a short time.

The accident came after the men had been on the mat for 16 minutes and 40 seconds.

The end came unexpectedly. Zbyszko threw Lurich heavily to the mat. Lurich's right elbow not only hit the mat hard, but the Pole also fell on it, tearing the tendons from the ulna bone, sometimes called the "crazy bone."

Although Zbyszko was entitled to the victory, Referee Toohey stated that on account of the great amount of betting there had been on the match, he thought it fair to call it "no contest."

In the semi-final Cyclone Bucos defeated Yousouf, a Syrian, in two straight falls in 15 minutes, 12 seconds and 9 minutes 4 seconds, while in the preliminary Joe Ierall won from Peter Goulet, the latter failing to accomplish a fall in 30 minutes as agreed.

SPORTS OF ALL SORTS

By RILEY

TY COBB, Sam Crawford, Oscar Stanage and Jean Dubuc will probably be missing when the Detroit squad starts for Gulfport, Miss. The climax of the greatest "hold out" of the year will be reached when the Tigers leave home tomorrow. The absence of the quartet will mean that President Frank Navin has not yielded to Cobb's demand for $15,000 and to the other three upon substantial increases of salary. It means, too, that Navin will stand pat upon the rule adopted by the magnates of both big leagues this season, to refuse to pay transportation to the training camps for "hold-outs" or to admit to the camps any men who have not signed their contracts for the season.

* * *

THIS is the magnates' unanimous reply to the squad of "hold-outs" whose attitude this year has amounted to not much less than a small strike of baseball stars. The demands of the stars were never greater than they have been this spring. Nearly every club has felt them. In order to bring the matter to an issue the magnates put up the bars to the training camps and the "hold-out" issue will reach a climax everywhere within the next week, as it will in Detroit tomorrow.

* * *

THE Red Sox have avoided the "hold-out" issue by giving substantial increases to most of the men, such a star as Speaker, for instance being reputed to receive a fifty per cent increase from $9,000 to $13,500 a year.

Joe Wood almost a hundred per cent increase from $4,000 to $7,500, and several others in smaller proportions. The solitary remaining Sox "hold-out," Bill Carrigan, has agreed to sign his contract next week.

* * *

THE Philadelphia Athletics, too, have avoided this issue, Connie Mack signing up practically his whole team without a "hold-out," notwithstanding his pay-roll is very much smaller than that of the Red Sox. It will surprise many "fans" to know that the stars who held the world's championship before Stahl's team captured it receive much smaller salaries than the Sox do. Stahl's indeed, for instance, is paid much more than the wonderful, stone wall, championship infield on Mack's team, and the outfield, of course, are nowhere compared with Mack's outer gardeners.

* * *

THE Red Sox can afford to pay these increases, but such teams as the Detroit Tigers cannot. So far Cobb-Crawford-Stanage-Dubuc issue is very serious to Detroit, and, as a matter of fact, to big league baseball everywhere. Cobb stands in a class by himself and the value of his services cannot be computed on a scale that would apply to any other man. Nobody can deny that, based upon his ability to earn money for a baseball magnate in a first class city, Cobb is certainly worth the $15,000 he demands. But Detroit, which was never a great baseball city even when the Tigers were winning championships, is hard pressed to pay unprecedented salaries and still return profits while the team is in the race and home crowds number in the hundreds instead of in the thousands.

* * *

THE Tigers are still a good drawing crowd away from Detroit, but mainly on account of Cobb's prestige. On this fact Cobb bases his demand upon Navin's exchequer.

* * *

WHETHER he thinks he can afford to give Cobb $15,000, Navin faces the possibility that if he lets the "Georgia Peach" quit baseball Detroit will suffer such a loss of prestige that it will lose it franchise altogether. It is the writer's opinion that without Cobb and Jennings, Detroit might be forced to drop out in favor of a better paying prospect.

* * *

PITTSBURG wants an American League franchise, and Baltimore, also is a larger city than Detroit, although its location in the East would handicap it because its appearance in big league company would upset the division between East and West. Buffalo is nearly as large as Detroit and might be a better big league town if it was readmitted into the seats of the mighty. Even Milwaukee might be restored to big league enthusiasm, if it were given a chance.

* * *

COBB'S demand means more than whether he, individually, will receive such a salary for other reasons, besides. If he forces Navin to capitulate it will mean a high water mark for baseball salaries set far beyond what the magnates hoped would be reached in years, if at all. In the wake of such a successful venture will follow an army of baseball players in Detroit and elsewhere, who will insist next spring upon what might very well become a wholesale readjustment of baseball salaries.

* * *

NEXT to Cobb, Crawford is the most valuable fielder on the Tiger team —one of the best in the big leagues. Stanage is Detroit's principal catcher. Dubuc is the Tiger's leading pitching hope. This trio has "held out" because Cobb "held out" and the quartet have let it be understood that they will sink or swim together. They are the cream of what is left of the ex-champions. If they succeed, look out for a similar state of affairs elsewhere next year. It will mean that the backbone of the magnates' resistance to the continual demand for higher pay has been broken and that the players have established the fact that the magnates are practically at their mercy if the players stick together.

POEHLER-'CHRIS' MATCH IS OFF UNTIL APRIL

The twenty-string bowling match between John Christopher and Paul Poehler will be held in April. This was made known today by Poehler, who, in a telephone message to the AMERICAN, stated that his business affairs would not allow him to bowl next month.

The Christopher-Poehler match was scheduled for next Monday and Tuesday evenings. Christopher contracted a bad cold and Poehler, on receiving notification of his opponent's illness, agreed to postpone the match. At that time it was thought that the match would be pulled off as soon as Chris had recovered.

BOWLING GOSSIP

No matches will be rolled in the Suburban League tonight because of the holiday tomorrow.

* * *

The Wood League teams will roll their closing matches tonight. Crimins & Pierce, which has led the league ever since the season began, is an easy winner.

* * *

The Schmidt bowling team is desirous of bowling the Bicknell & Fuller aggregation at any time, at any place and for any consideration that may be satisfactory to that team.

* * *

Gill Ryan has presented Carl Lindberg a beautiful loving cup as a token of his esteem for the fine work which Lindberg has done for Gill's specials in the Elite League this season.

* * *

George "Ike" Bradley of the Metropolitan Club of Somerville, through his manager, James Breslin, issues a challenge to Tom Anderson, the Manhattan bowler, to bowl a twenty-string match. Mr. Breslin seems very much offended because of a note concerning the respective bowling of Bradley and Anderson, which favored the latter. He further states that Bradley has the best average of the two, with 106, while his opponent has but 98 in four games.

* * *

A match has been arranged between the ten best bowlers of the A. O. U. W. League and the ten best shooters in the Newspaper League, to be rolled at the New Boston alleys.

JAMES HENNIGAN

JAMES HENNIGAN is the Maiden youth who startled the followers of track sports throughout New England by his brilliant work during the season of 1911. Not ever seventeen years of age at that time he jumped into the limelight as one of the premier distance runners in New England. He could run any distance from two to ten miles and even take part in the distance runs of twenty-five miles.

His greatest race was the three-mile run at the annual city of Boston games conducted on the Commons. Here he ran from scratch with Joseph Silva, the B. A. A. veteran distance runner. Silva had to retire at the end of the second mile and Hennigan won the event. Previous to this meeting he had won innumerable events at the three and five-mile distance.

Hennigan's downfall came in the Boston Athletic Association Marathon where the distance was too much for him. He competed the distance, however, and as a result was forced to lay off from active competition for some time.

Hennigan has now resumed training and will take part in all of the coming meets. He was a competitor at the B. A. A. games in the three mile scratch race but was unable to show his best owing to being off form.

TWO HARVARD TEAMS IN PROVIDENCE MEET

Harvard will send two relay teams to the Armory meet in Providence tomorrow evening, which will meet Technology teams. The men on the short distance team will each have 300 yards to run and those on the other team will cover 720 yards each. The short distance team will be made up as usual of O'Brien, Tower, Hilling and Barron. The long distance team will be made up of Koch, Stone, MacClure and Warren.

ARLINGTON-ALLEN IN TRACK GAMES

Arlington High and Allen School of West Newton will hold a dual track meet at West Newton today. This is the first time either school has had an indoor track team, and as both schools are out to win Arlington High will be strong in the middle distance runs and should score heavily, while Allen School expects to score many points in the shorter runs.

SCHOOL HOCKEY TEAMS TO MEET IN ARENA GAMES

The second series of hockey games at the Arena will be played tomorrow morning with six rival teams battling for supremacy. The future of schoolboy hockey games at the Arena Saturday mornings depends on these games. If enthusiasm is lacking, the Arena will deprive the school teams of this morning each week. It is therefore entirely up to the followers of the teams to make it a big success.

In the opening game, the championship Arlington High team will play Malden. This game should be hotly contested, as every team that lines up against Arlington is always out to win. Malden showed its worth at the Arena last Saturday by holding the strong Medford High team to a 1 to 1 score.

The second game will bring together the scions of Chelsea High and Revere High. These schools are rivals in all branches of sports and a big crowd from each town will be on hand to root for their favorite. Chelsea is the slight favorite over the beach boys, but the latter will make Chelsea hustle every minute in order to win. Chelsea is represented by a good seven this season and in the games played have shown good form. Revere has played but a few games and will be handicapped on this account.

Winchester High and Lexington High will clash in the final game and this should be a grand climax. The teams of both schools have been able to play many games during the past few weeks and are in good condition for a hard game.

"Pete" Sortwell has been elected captain of next season's Harvard hockey team. Sortwell has been playing a wonderful game this season and has been the mainstay on the Harvard seven for two years.

The McGill hockey team, which is to play the B. A. A. at the Arena tomorrow night, will arrive in Boston tomorrow morning. This is a challenge game and should be a bummer.

George V. Brown of the B. A. A. has received the entry of Frank Pratt of Portland High for the mile run.

Dr. Thomas Harrington, director of hygiene, asked the B. A. A. to shorten the relay races at the schoolboy games for East Boston, Hyde Park, Charlestown, Brighton and West Roxbury High.

HANOVER, N. H., Feb. 21.—Jack Dellinger has been elected captain of the Dartmouth hockey team for next season.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—Abel Kiviat, world's record holder, will start in the mile run at the Georgetown University games tomorrow night.

Coach Walter Boyson, coach of the Lynn English track team, has enlisted Lewis Long for the 1,000-yard run at the B. A. A. games. The school will also enter a relay team.

MARTIN, Tex., Feb. 21.—Jim Thorpe has already started to hit the ball hard and in practice he kept the outfielders busy for out the ball yesterday.

The boys at Quincy High are hard at work in preparation for their annual indoor athletic meet, to be held on March 5.

The weight candidates for Tufts track team have started outdoor practice under Coach McDonald. Thorndike is showing great form in the shot-put, and Coach McDonald believes he will be a big point winner.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Columbia and Pennsylvania will meet tonight in their annual dual swimming meet in the Blue and White tank.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—The pitchers and catchers of the New York Americans will sail tonight to join Manager Chance at Bermuda.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—A syndicate headed by John R. Madden has purchased from the estate of the late James R. Keene, the one-time great racer Ballot for $50,000. Ballot will be used for breeding purposes.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Lawrence Waterbury, New York, and Harold McCormick, Chicago, victors in the semi-final round in the national racquet championship tournament at the Racquet and Tennis Club, will meet for the title tomorrow.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Young Kurtz, the Newark middleweight, defeated Jack McCarron, Philadelphia. Jack O'Brien's $50,000 boxer, in a ten-round bout at the Forty-second Street Sporting Club.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Feb. 21.—The Army team defeated Norwich University at hockey, 5 to 0.

HADDOCK, Ga., Feb. 21.—McTighe Brown, Perdue and Devogt of the Boston Nationals have reported to Manager Stallings and will start active preparations for the season today. Otto Hess is expected today.

President McAleer has arranged an exhibition game with Buffalo at Buffalo on May 23. This is an open date on the Red Sox League schedule.

Buck O'Brien is expected to sign early next week with the Red Sox and leave for Hot Springs with Carrigan and Wagner on Wednesday.

The Harvard wrestling team defeated the Boston Y. M. C. A. 5 to 2 last night in the dual match, which was held at Cambridge.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Hongwell won the final today in the annual rowing event for the Waterloo cup and $2,500, beating Halden.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 21.—Overall, former star hurler of the Cubs, who has been out of the game for two seasons and who was recently reinstated, has decided not to accept the proffer of the Cubs. The contract offered Overall called for $4,000. $200 more than he got when he was formerly with the team, and $800 less than he asked.

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 21.—Rule Marquard today feels just as he did after that twenty-inning game. Yesterday the Giant pitcher had decided to stay out of baseball for a year and continue in vaudeville.

The Plunderers

By CUTCLIFFE HYNE

An Adventure of the Famous Captain Kettle

PART II.

SHE bowed her head gravely.

"And so," he said bitterly, "after all I have gone through and all I've done, you want me to give this fortune up. My God, Elsie, you know what a hateful thing poverty is as well as I do.

"Think what this money will mean. But love for one another we have already, and we can get besides every pleasure the heart can wish for. I know as well as you do that it was dirtily earned, and I hated the work of getting it, and I'll never dabble in anything so foul again.

"My instincts tell me I live as an upright gentleman, and with the income I'll do that and forget I was ever anything else. When I cease to be poor, I cease to be in the way of temptation.

"Don't you see? And besides, there's no chance to be found out. The money is supposed to be blotted out of existence, and it's there now in the Giulia as a private mine to dig at as we choose.

"Besides, I'm bound in honor to go on after getting those fifty. It isn't as if I were working for my own hand alone. Shelf is my partner, and I can't neglect his interest for a cent of it."

"Mr. Shelf can do as he chooses, Pat. You, yourself, may do as you choose, dear, but I can't alter what I've said. I have money, heaven knows, but I couldn't use money of that sort. You might forget how it came. I couldn't. I can't forget some things.

"I've a terrible memory when I don't want it to act. I tried to forget you, Pat, ever since you left us in England, till the day I saw you here. But I couldn't. I used to pray for forgetful ness all those years, and it wouldn't come, and if I were to marry you now, dear, with that money, I should always remember just in the same way.

"What is the use of carrying thumb screws in your pocket?" he asked, half angrily.

Smiles Little Pained Smile

She smiled a little, pained smile. "Can't help it, Pat. I suppose it's the way I'm built. But I'm only telling you facts."

"I thought," he said brusquely, "you wanted to go back to society and have a steam yacht and do things comfortably. Now, without this quarter of a million, which is lying ready to be picked up, you have £200 a year, and I have £500 a year, which makes £700 in all.

"Now, it might turn out to you that one can't do much continental splashing among smart people on that in London or anywhere else, unless, of course, you married someone else.

She flushed painfully. "Oh, Pat!" she said, "I don't think I deserve that from you."

He dropped his arms around her and drew her to him tenderly.

"No, dear, you didn't; I was a brute. But it's hard for a man to speak soberly when he's just had all his plans smashed into the smallest kind of fragments and stamped upon by the only person in the world whose opinion he cares a rap about.

"Of course, I knew all this business was a theft, a piece of piracy pure and simple.

"But circumstances showed me into it, and I bowed my head to them. Circumstances—you that is, and you entirely—now drag me out of it, and I'm going to bow again and say 'Kismet,' only I would like what will become of the money.

"I swear Shelf hasn't have the whole half million and the steamer, too.

"But I don't see how we are going to give my share back to the rightful owner. One can't very well draw a check on the Everglades and send it to them anonymously by post."

Mr. Shelf's Little Surprise

MR. THEODORE SHELF had reached the end of his tether, and like all smart business men he knew it.

It was a certain mad excitement in standing on a high ledge of an iceberg when the steps you have clambered up by have splintered away and the hundred feet cliffs above are threatening every instant to descend in a crashing avalanche.

You know you'll have to jump into the cold green water below or be crushed out of existence, and lingering to the very last second is not without its fierce pleasure. The dive is chilly, the waters beneath are known, final escape most hazardous. But it is not these which sway you. It is the nearness of the crash behind, and that is fascinating beyond all words.

Mr. Shelf was in a similar position. He knew that his commercial judge was growing more and more dangerous every minute by reason of the law of the land which loomed above him, and yet for the life of him he could not tear himself away. He had waiting for him that snug hacienda on the banks of Rio Verde company which he had time before made ready for the possible catastrophe, but he left to wait.

The excitement of lingering on in London was meat and drink to him. His darling would be spoken to afterward, and though he might not be blessed, it is true, still he would not be forgotten. The last was the chief reason which made him stay on. The vanity of the man was colossal.

He had been tickled by the improving young man, he had been tickled by the tubercaclo, he had been tickled by a Parliamentary constituency, but these did not glut him.

He wanted more, far more, and if he could not distinguish himself in the way his wife had hoped, he would at least be famous in his fraud.

He had a scheme in his waiting of taking a vengeance on this same wife who had made it necessary for him to fall at all. Without her wild extravagance he would have been able to weather the commercial depression which had weighed him down, but she had scoffed at warnings, and harassed the master-mind of her guests and fed them on bank notes.

What this scheme was he confided to no one but George, and George did not spill. George hated Mrs. Shelf to the extent of showing ivory whenever she was near him.

"George," said Mr. Shelf at the conclusion of one of these grim conferences, "I shall be a lonely man." You must come out there with me." And George poked a coal black nose into Mr. Shelf's hand and said that he should be vastly disappointed if he were left behind.

Now, Mr. Theodore Shelf intended to have his vengeance on the night of a ball which his wife was going to give, a ball which for sheer gorgeousness and distinguished assembly would be the first by far all her previous efforts, and he was quite satisfied in his own mind that the action would be entirely justifiable. Still, he was a man not without natural affections.

He was extremely fond of his ward, Amy Rivers, for even through the well-fashioned wooden-headedness of his co-trustee Amy drew a small annual handing of a penny of her money.

The co-trustee was a lawyer with an inquiring nose for new and corporation stocks, and he insisted on Miss Rivers' fortune staying in those, and showed once why the scrip should remain in his own office safe.

The money tempted Theodore Shelf to the sin of covetousness continually—he could have made such excellent use of it himself—but he managed to keep it. He never visited his irritation on his ward.

But Disagreeable Once

Indeed he was only known to be disagreeable to her once, and that once was the last time he and she had speech together, and what he had said was entirely to her interest and without any profit to himself. It was on the morning of the great ball and he called her to him in his room and asked if Fairfax had been there that evening.

"Of course," she said. "Why?"

"After what has passed between us?"

"You mean in the city?"

"I do, my dear. Mr. Fairfax has displeased me much. First of all he resigned from the directorate of my new company the Brothers Steamship Association of which I had placed him, a very flattering position for so young a man, and then he caused me deep sorrow in doubting the pureness of my motives in floating the company at all.

"I am long suffering, Amy, and because it is my duty to bear with the hasty I do so as much as possible. But Mr. Fairfax overstepped the mark. Such a spirit as his would cause dissension among our simple-minded workers, and I felt it due to them that he should no longer be at their sides."

"So you gave him the—wall, sack? Of course, I know."

"Perhaps," said Mr. Shelf, with a smile of pain. "He will be able to obtain employment elsewhere and being a young man of means he may choose to set up in business for himself, but I fear, my dear, that he will miss many of the Christian influences which so elevate and purify the dependents of Marmaduke, Rivers and Shelf."

Miss Rivers shrugged her shoulders. "Isn't this," she said, "a big row on in the city and not the park lane?" As Mrs. Shelf says, we're ordinary society heathens when we're here, and as she sent Hamilton his card I don't see that it matters. It's Mrs. Shelf's home."

"And not mine, Amy? You are right in the word, my dear, but not in spirit. As a Christian, of course, I have already forgiven the wrong Mr. Fairfax has done me in doubting the purpose of my motives. But this humble roof is mine, Amy, and it would grieve me to receive under it any one with whom I am not on terms of brotherly amity. But, perhaps you can assure me, my dear, that Mr. Fairfax has already repented him of his hasty and unjust words."

"Not that," said Miss Rivers, "I am sure he hasn't."

Then replied Mr. Theodore Shelf, with a sorrowful firmness, "I cannot receive him, I could not."

"I suppose you know," the girl retorted shortly, "that if Hamilton does not come here too I shan't either."

"You are my ward."

"I MAY be, but you've never tyrannised over me; you are not going to begin now. I tell you again that it's no Hamilton, it's going to be no me. I shall go to Hamstead to stay with my cousin."

"I cannot give way in this, Amy, my conscience will not permit me."

"Very well. May I have a carriage or may I order a hansom?"

"My dear child, I can refuse you nothing in reason. The trouble with you, as it always has been, entirely at your disposal."

Miss Rivers left the room, and Mr. Shelf scrubbed his dog's ragged head.

"She's angry with me now, George," he said, with a fat, satisfied smile. "But I think she'll change her mind afterward. She's a clever girl and she'll see. So with that beggar Fairfax, confound him!"

Then Mr. Shelf put George on a comfortable chair and turned to his tables. He had, as may be imagined, a good deal of writing to put through and a considerable deal of burning, and the work took him till very late.

He dressed, sipped out to dinner and returned by 11 o'clock to stand behind his wife and watch her as she received her guests. He thought he had never seen the woman look so handsome, or so queenly, and once or twice he half regretted the blow which he was going to bring down upon her.

But then his eyes would fall on the walls of the room and the silver lamps and the flowers, and the items of that gorgeous display would go into his soul and set either up any morsel of compassion which might have been there.

Apples Remark to Self

"A man's impelling motive is not always under his own hat," he overheard some one saying as he passed him, and he applied the words to himself, and when he resumed the ruthless extravagance which no word of entreaties of his own could stay, and which alone—so he believed—forced him to contrive he felt that social debt was a poor requital to the woman who had worked his wife.

A Mrs. Fairfax more her due. As yet—and yet—she was a monstrous fine woman and she thoroughly drew in the role she had set herself to play.

It certainly was a gorgeous assembly—not quite so exclusive as the very best people, perhaps, though many of them were there, but it took wealth unspeakable. Men in evening dress cannot show this. If they fall to appear like waiters, that is the best they can achieve. But the women! They carried it on their shoulders and backs, as they have done since the beginning of time. Their dresses were a dream of cost and loveliness, their jewelry a chain of rainbows.

"Oh, Lord!" said one young man with predatory instincts who propped a wall. "Why am I not a practising bushranger just now? There's some of the finest diamonds here in all the world, and two Johnnies with pistols could stick up the whole house. Why is England such a beastly safe place? If there was a hard wooden chair anywhere to sit on and think, I believe I'd turn anarchist on the spot."

"Don't reduce the crowd to A. A.," said a fellow prop. "It spoils the poetry of the thing. Now, I find them good enough to look at."

"Never said they weren't," rejoined the other. "Only thing they aren't mine. Now I could do very well with the lot of them."

Miss Jean Morrison Urges Women and Children to Keep Streets Clean

Miss Jean Morrison, Chairman of the East Boston Women's League.

MISS JEAN MORRISON, chairman of the East Boston Women's League, has been instrumental through her association in teaching the boys and girls in her neighborhood to keep clean the streets that they have to use everyday. Through her influence many mothers talk the matter over with their children at home.

Miss Morrison also believes that every woman should be interested in this matter in the community where she lives. She should give her attention first of all to the home life, but she should not allow that home life to absorb all her time or energies.

Women's clubs, according to her, should do some civic work regularly. Nothing is better for women in every community than to be strong advocates of clean streets, and she thinks that women should begin their civic work in this way.

Miss Morrison said:

"While a woman's interests should be in her home, I think that they should not end there. There are so many matters bearing upon the welfare of the community where you live that should enlist the corporation of women.

"Every town should be kept clean.

"You go through many towns and see the main thoroughfares tolerably well-kept, but in the side streets so much rubbish is allowed to litter up the alleys.

"It always seems to me that the work of keeping the towns and cities clean is one of the best ways for women to begin their civic work. Often it is said, what can a woman do for the town?

"I used to be thought that all a woman could do was to get up dinners for town officials at public functions. Then many would infer that the interest of a woman ended right there.

"This is where the mistake is made. We have done much through our East Boston League to teach the children cleanliness and to show that neatness by keeping the neighborhood free from rubbish.

"You know, there is nothing that sets a street off better than to have it kept clean.

"First, it seems to me that sidewalks should be kept attractive and that every child should be taught not to throw waste paper or rubbish promiscuously around.

"Such teaching of the children can well begin at home with the mother's interest. Then it should go farther, every child should be taught to, as far as possible, take a special interest in the street where it lives, and with other children in the same locality, make the street presentable.

"Nothing is so repelling as dirty streets. Just before the Spring comes we will be treated to this in many instances throughout New England.

"Secondly, instead of women's clubs devoting so much time as some of them do to subjects that are absolutely foreign to their purpose as clubs, it would be well for every one of them in the different communities to spend at least, two months in talking clean towns and clean alley ways, and in getting the children interested.

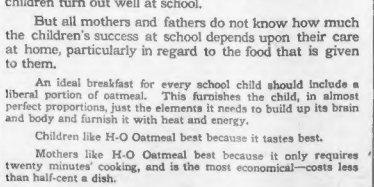
"People will throw thoughtlessly their rubbish away, and often it is allowed to remain in one place until it becomes an eyesore.

"Many a town and city in New England is rendered ugly because no one seems to be vitally interested in this question of clean streets and by-ways.

"Women could begin their civic interests in every community by tackling this matter. If every woman would become an advocate of clean streets where she lives, and impress the same upon her children, dirty streets would be the exception.

"Whether women want the vote or not, this is another question, but if we get every women's club to devote its energies in the coming two months to clean streets, and apply other agencies to get them, is not this an advance step, and how much will it set off many streets that are now becoming littered with small things? It is not always the big things thrown away that make a street look unsightly. It is scattering here and there pieces of paper, small remnants of fruit and other little things that are so untwisting.

"So, I say, let the women all over New England begin their civic work in coming out strong for clean streets."



There is good brain material in H-O Oatmeal

All mothers and fathers are proud when their children turn out well at school.

But all mothers and fathers do not know how much the children's success at school depends upon their care at home, particularly in regard to the food that is given to them.

An ideal breakfast for every school child should include a liberal portion of oatmeal. This furnishes the child, in almost perfect proportions, just the elements it needs to build up its brain and body and furnish it with heat and energy.

Children like H-O Oatmeal best because it tastes best.

Mothers like H-O Oatmeal best because it only requires twenty minutes' cooking, and is the most economical—costs less than half-cent a dish.

Tomorrow morning is a good time to begin eating H-O.

The Social Calendar

Society Happenings Tomorrow

Massachusetts Society, Daughters of the Revolution, at Vendome; music and speaking.

Shakespeare recital in ballroom of the Somerset by Marshall Darrach.

Barnard Memorial festival at Mechanics Hall.

Officers' party of the English High regiments at High School Armory on Montgomery street.

Public reception by Governor Foss and Lieutenant-Governor Walsh in Hall of Flags, State House.

First Corps Cadets' dance at the Armory in evening.

Meeting of Society of Colonial Wars at rooms of the New England Genealogical Society at 2:30.

Birthday dance of Miss Corlew of Brookline at the Copley-Plaza.

Progressive "Birthday Party" at South Armory, evening.

SOCIETY tomorrow has a well filled round of events to be carried out; Washington's Birthday is to spell the call for many social gatherings. Dinners, dances, fetes and gayeties of varied forms will take place.

Undoubtedly the dance of the First Corps of Cadets in the evening will draw a large crowd of fashionables. Many noted patronesses are on the list of those who will be present at the dance of Miss Corlew of Brookline at the Copley-Plaza, and without doubt the gathering of the "Daughters" at the Vendome will call out another extensive circle of women.

Mrs. Guy W. Currier, Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn, Mrs. Merlon L. Higgins, Mrs. Henry H. Hill, Mrs. Annie H. Gaylord, Mrs. William H. Riddle, and Dr. Eliza B. Cahill will be among Miss Corlew's dance patrons. Miss Mabel Going, with an orchestra of five pieces, is to have charge of the music.

An event of interest in Mattapan and Milton will be the second annual minstrel show of the Mattapan Council, K. of C., in which forty of the younger set of that district will play the tambos and bones.

Ball Mossers from all over the State will be present at the "Birthday Party" of the Progressives to take place tomorrow evening at the Irvington Street Armory. National committeemen and New York Progressives of distinction have been invited and a host of well-known Boston women who have allied themselves with the cause or are interested in it will be seated at the tables.

The State branch of the Sons of the American Revolution, like the Daughters, will hold a meeting at the Vendome. They will gather at 10:30 in the forenoon.

A wedding in which society is greatly interested is that of Miss Edith Lee DeWitt and Valrey Hildreth Tarbell, the latter of No. 283 Commonwealth avenue. The ceremony will take place in Leominster, at No. 40 Washington street, the home of the bride's parents.

The Alliance Francaise will have a meeting tomorrow at the Tuileries.

A very pretty event of tomorrow will be the annual children's party given by the women of the Boston Catholic Union, to occur in the ballroom of the Union building.

Mrs. Henry Grant, who is chairman of the "Daughters'" annual day at the Vendome tomorrow, has prepared an interesting program of entertainment. One speaker will be Mrs. Ida Farr Miller, who gives a paper on Mary Ball Washington. There will be music.

The Vineyard Haven Vacationists will dine at the Thorndike at 7 in the evening; the Ancients will have a dinner at 2 in the afternoon at the American House and a smoke talk at the Revere House later; the Eleventh Regiment will have a reunion at the Revere House in the afternoon; the "Women's Charity Club" will hold Colonial evening in Steinert Hall; the Massachusetts Society of Cincinnati will dine tomorrow evening at the University Club.

Dog Tired

One scorching day, when his comrades were nearly prostrated, a soldier was seen carrying his own gun and another's man's, two cartridge belts, two knapsacks, and a dog. The colonel stopped him.

"Look here, you marched all yesterday and you fought all last night," the colonel said.

"Yes, sir," said the young soldier, respectfully.

"Well, then, what are you carrying that dog for?"

"Because, colonel," said the soldier, "the dog's tired."

Good Riddance

HUGO ARNOT, the historian of Edinburgh, was one day waited upon by a woman who requested him to advise her how she might best get rid of an admirer whose importunities caused her annoyance. The woman was the reverse of fascinating, and Arnot, being indisposed to flatter her vanity, replied:

"Oh, you had better marry the fellow."

"Marry him!" replied the astonished woman. "I would see him hanged first."

"Marry him, then," persisted the humorist, "and I'll bet he'll soon hang himself."

"Old Faery Tales Made New"

"The Princess and the Swineherd"

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner

By Nell Brinkley

DO you 'member that old Hans Andersen tale—and the picture that always goes with it? A Princess ringed about by the outspread skirts of her pretty maids, while she bends her royal lips to the herder of her father's swine?

Do you remember its simple beginning? A heart-story in a tiny sentence—that might well make any modern young chap who is one of the night-and-morning ride of workers on State street or at the South Station smite himself on the chest and say, "That's ME!"

Here it is: "THERE WAS A POOR PRINCE WHOSE KINGDOM WAS QUITE SMALL BUT STILL IT WAS LARGE ENOUGH TO MARRY UPON, AND THAT IS WHAT HE WANTED TO DO!"

"There was a poor Prince"—— sh-h-h. But the Princess preferred a swineherd.

In the faery-tale—which is also the plainest facts—the Prince was poor, but he had a rose to offer the Princess—and a nightingale. Now the Princess was an angel—flower-face gold-heart—but by some strange twist in her mind (any one but he who loved her would have called it "narrow-mean hearted"), she pouted when he laid the rose and the nightingale at her slipper-dons and wished it was a "pussy-cat!" She would have none of the rose and the nightingale —and, with her back on the Prince and "pussy-cat" thoughts in her head, her eyes fell on the swineherd—shock-headed—unlovely! But in his hands he held two toys. And the Princess coveted them with all her heart!

So she sold her kisses and her heart to the swineherd in trade for a brace of toys!

And the poor Prince clutched his heart and said, "You would not have an honest Prince—you did not value the rose and the nightingale, but for a plaything you kissed the swineherd and gave him your heart!"

So many a Princess in heart and soul gives herself to a swineherd for a handful of toys (a bag of gold and that trifle "position"), while a Prince-among-men pockets his offered-and-scorned gems—the rose of his heart and the harmony of a perfect love—and takes the trail alone!

NELL BRINKLEY.

"So many a Princess gives herself to a swineherd for a handful of toys—(a bag of gold and that trifle 'position')—while a Prince-among-men pockets his offered-and-scorned gems and takes the trail alone." (The little story by Miss Brinkley that accompanies this picture is printed in the first column of this page.)

The Mystery of Mary

A Thrilling Story of a Strange Disappearance and of Love Triumphant

By GRACE LIVINGSTON HILL LUTZ

Copyright, 1912, by J. B. Lippincott Co.

PART I. (Continued.)

DUNHAM'S indignant mind continued to dwell upon the headlines, to the annoying accompaniment of screech-owl and frog and cricket. He resented the adjective "pretty." Why should any reporter dare to apply that word to a sweet and lovely woman? It seemed so superficial, so belittling, and—but then, of course, this headline did not apply to his new friend.

It was some other poor creature, some one to whom perhaps the word "pretty" really applied; some one who was not really beautiful, only pretty.

At the first stop a man in front got out, leaving a newspaper in his seat. With eager hands, Dunham leaned forward and grasped it, searching its columns in vain for the tantalizing headlines.

A Poisoner?

This paper announced the mysterious disappearance of a young actress who was suspected of poisoning her husband.

When seen last she was boarding a train en route to Washington. She had not arrived there, however, so far as could be discovered. It was supposed that she was lingering in the vicinity of Philadelphia or Baltimore. There were added a few incriminating details concerning her relationship with her dead husband, and brief sketch of her sensational life. The paragraph closed with the statement that she was an accomplished musician.

The young man frowned and, opening his window, flung the scandalous sheet to the breeze. He determined to forget what he had read, yet the lines kept coming before his eyes.

When he reached the city he went to the news stand in the station, where was an agent who knew him, and procured a copy of every paper on sale. Then, instead of hurrying home, he found a seat in a secluded corner and proceeded to examine his purchases.

In large letters on the front page of a New York paper blazed:

"HOUSE ROBBED OF SEVERAL WORTH TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS BY A BEAUTIFUL YOUNG ADVENTURESS MASQUERING AS A PARLOR MAID."

He ran his eye down the column and gathered that she was still at large, though the entire police force of New York was on her track.

He shivered at the thought and began to feel sympathy for all wrongdoers and truants from the law. It was horrible to have detectives out everywhere watching for beautiful young women, just when this one in whom his interest centred was trying to escape from something.

He turned to another paper, only to be met by the words:

"ESCAPE OF FAIR LUNITIC and underneath:

Police cells could not confine Miss Nancy Lee, who last week, threw a lighted lamp at her mother, setting fire to the house, and then attempted suicide. The young woman seems to have recovered her senses and professes to know nothing of what happened, but the physicians say she is liable to another attack of insanity, and deem it safe to keep her confined. She escaped during the night, leaving no clew to her whereabouts. How she managed to get open the window through which she left the asylum is still a mystery.

In disgust he flung the paper from him and took up another.

"FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED! BEAUTIFUL YOUNG HEIRESS MISSING.

His soul turned sick within him. He looked up and saw a little procession of late revellers rushing out to the last suburban train, the girls leaving a trail of orris perfume and a vision of dainty opera cloaks.

One of the men was a city friend of his. Dunham half envied him his unperturbed mind.

To be sure, he would not get back to the city till 3 in the morning, but he would have no visions of robberies and fair lunatics and hard-pressed maiden unjustly pursued, to mar his rest.

DUNHAM buttoned up his coat and turned up his collar as he started out into the street, for the night had turned cold, and his nerves made him chilly. As he walked the blood began to race more healthily in his veins, and the horrors of the evening papers were dispelled.

In their place came pleasant memories of the evening at Mrs. Bowman's, of the music, and of their ride and talk together, in his heart a hope began to rise that her dark days would pass, and the night find her again and know her better.

His brief night's sleep was cut short by a sharp knock at his door the next morning. He awoke with a confused idea of being on a sleeping car and wondered if he had plenty of time to dress, but his servant was quickly dispelled the illusion.

"Tryon, aren't you almost ready to come down to breakfast? Do hurry, please. I've something awfully important to consult you about."

Norah Is Blamed

His sister's tone told him there was need for haste if he would keep in her good graces, so he made a hurried toilet and went down to find his household in a state of excitement.

"I'm just as worried as I can be," declared his mother. "I want to consult you, Tryon, and I cannot bear to accuse her unjustly, but I have missed a number of little things lately. There was my gold link bag——"

"Mother, you know you said you were sure you left that at the Century Club."

"Don't interrupt, Cornelia. Of course, it is possible I left it at the clubroom, but I begin to think now I didn't have it with me at all. Then there is my opal ring. To be sure, it isn't worth a great deal, but one who will take little things will take large ones."

"What's the matter, mother? Norah been appropriating property not her own?"

"I'm very much afraid she has, Tryon. What would you do about it? It is no unpleasant to charge a person with steal-ing. It is such a vulgar thing to steal. Somehow I thought Nora was more refined."

"Why, I suppose there's nothing to do but just charge her with it, is there? Are you quite sure it is gone? What is it, any way? A ring, did you say?"

"No, it's a hat," said Cornelia shortly, "a sixty-dollar hat. I wish I'd kept it now, and then she wouldn't have dared. It had two beautiful willow ostrich plumes on it, but mother didn't think it was becoming. She wanted some color about it instead of all black.

"I left it in my room, and charged Norah to see that the man got it when he called, and now the man comes and says he wants the hat, and it is gone! Norah insists that when she last saw it, it was in my room. But of course that's absurd, for there was nobody else to take it but Thompson, and he's been in the family for so long."

"Nonsense!" said her brother sharply, dropping his fruit knife in his plate with a rattle that made the young woman jump. "Cornelia, I'm ashamed of you, thinking that poor innocent girl has stolen your hat. Why, she wouldn't steal a pin, I am sure. You can tell she's honest by looking into her eyes. Girls with blue eyes like that don't lie and steal."

Appeals to His Mother

"Really!" Cornelia remarked haughtily. "You seem to know a great deal about her eyes. You may feel differently when I find the hat in her possession."

"Cornelia," interrupted Tryon, quite beside himself, "don't think of such a thing as speaking to that poor girl about that hat. I know she hasn't stolen it. The hat will probably be found, and then how will you feel?"

"But I tell you the hat cannot be found!" said the exasperated sister. "And I shall just have to pay for a hat that I can never wear."

"Mother, I appeal to you," said the son earnestly. "Don't allow Cornelia to speak of the hat to the girl. I wouldn't have such an injustice done in our house. The hat will turn up soon if you just go about the matter calmly. You'll find it quite naturally and unexpectedly, perhaps. Any way, if you don't, I'll pay for the hat, rather than have the girl suspected."

"But, Tryon," protested his mother, "if she isn't honest, you know we wouldn't want her about."

"Honest, mother? She's as honest as the day is long. I am certain of that."

The mother rose reluctantly. "Well, well, we will let it go another day," she conceded. Then, looking up at the sky, she added, "I wonder if it is going to rain. I have a Reciprocity meeting on for today, and I'm a delegate to some little band-of place. It usually does rain when one goes into the country, I've noticed."

She went into the hall, and presently returned with a distressed look upon her face.

"Tryon, I'm afraid you're wrong," she said. "Now my raincoat is missing. My new raincoat! I hung it up in the hall-closet with my own hands, after it came from the store. I really think something ought to be done!"

"There! I hope you see!" said Cornelia severely. "I think it's high time something was done. I shall phone for a detective at once."

Saving Her Reputation

"Cornelia, you'll do nothing of the kind," her brother protested, now thoroughly aroused. "I'll agree to pay for the hat and the raincoat if they are not forthcoming before a fortnight passes, but you simply shall not rob that poor girl's reputation. I insist, mother, that you put a stop to such rash proceedings. I'll make myself personally responsible for that girl's honesty."

"Well, of course, Tryon, if you wish it"——said his mother, with anxious hesitation.

"I certainly do wish it, mother. I shall take it as personal if anything is done in this matter without consulting me. Remember, Cornelia, I will not have any trifling. A girl's reputation is certainly worth more than several hats and raincoats, and I know she has not taken them."

He walked from the dining room and from the house in angry dignity, to the astonishment of his mother and sister, to whom he was usually courtesy itself. Consulting him about household matters was as a rule merely a form, for he almost never interfered. The two women looked at each other in startled bewilderment.

"Mother," said Cornelia, "you don't suppose he can have fallen in love with Norah, do you? Why, she's Irish and freckled! And Tryon has always been so fastidious."

"Cornelia! How dare you suggest such a thing? Tryon is a Dunham. Whatever else a Dunham may or may not do, he never does anything low or unrefined."

The small, prim, stylish mother looked quite regal in her aristocratic rage.

"But, mother, one reads such dreadful things in the papers now. Of course, Tryon would never marry any one like that, but——"

"Cornelia"—her mother's voice had almost reached a patrician scream—"I forbid you to mention the subject again. I cannot think where you learned to voice such thoughts!"

"Well, my goodness, mother, I don't mean anything, only I do wish I had my hat. I always did like all black. I can't imagine what ails Try, if it isn't that."

TARES AND TEARS

DURING a Bible lesson the teacher was trying to explain the Parable of the Tares.

"Can any of you tell me any person who is like the Evil One, who sowed the tares?" she asked.

A little hand instantly shot up from the foot of the class.

"Well, Tommy," she said, "what person is like the Evil One?"

"Please ma'am," replied Tommy, "my mother."

"Why," asked the teacher in astonishment.

"Because," answered the boy, eyeing his patched trousers, "she sews tears."

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

RESPECT THEIR WISHES

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

In two weeks I will be eighteen years of age. I am deeply in love with a young man two years my senior and my love is returned. My people object to me having a young man friend. ANNA.

EIGHTEEN seems to you just now an age of discretion and great wisdom. When you are a few years older you will decide that at eighteen you had no sense at all. Can you not see that your parents are wiser than you? Yield to their wishes till you are twenty-one.

EVERY CHANCE IN THE WORLD.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A short time ago I met a young lady with whom I at once fell in love. I asked her out, but she refused, saying she kept company with another man, though I heard she liked me very much. Do you think she is trying to annoy me or make me jealous, and do you think there is any means open to me to win her hand in marriage, as I like her very much? AN EARNEST SUITOR.

BE persistent. Study her wishes and try to please her. Your letter has such a manly tone I am sure it will be for her happiness to be your wife; so don't despair.

YOU ARE A FOOLISH GIRL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am in love with a first cousin who is seven years my senior. Taking advantage of Leap Year, I sent him a proposal at which he greatly marveled, by some misfortune he found out I sent it. We had a few interviews, in one of which he promised to marry me at the end of two years if I remained true. At present he prefers to love just as two loving cousins would. Do you advise me to wait? I am only sixteen.

ANXIOUS.

THE proposal was a child-ish proceeding, and I hope you will retrieve yourself by claiming it was a joke.

Of course the probation is senseless for he is your cousin, and a marriage between cousins is not to be thought of. Do end this foolishness, and see that there is no repetition.

Sees More Peril in Back Bay Dust Than in Sewer Gas

Professor William T. Sedgewick of Tech told the members of the Boston City Club that countless germs of all sorts and pollutions come to the surface and are caught up in "Back Bay dust storms" and carried into the human system. He said the dark, dry coats of dust were more dangerous than the air of sewers. He explained the theory that sewer gas is poisonous, declaring it has been found to be exceptionally pure.

The professor declares that the price of milk is bound to go up in Boston as a result of the "decreasing number of cows and increasing number of babies."

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

There was little improvement in stock markets in this country when they opened, although a better tone is reported in London. Locally trading was limited and the price tendency was downward. During the first hour Grannby and Osceola sold a point below and Davis-Daly and a few fractional issues in a number of other issues. United Fruit went down half a point. Settle Bessel were unchanged.

The Boston office of the Lake Copper Company has heard from General Manager Hitchcock that the deepest shaft is still showing rich copper.

Copper exports for the week ending yesterday showed a decrease of 2,144 tons.

It is stated from afire that J. P. Morgan passed a very comfortable night and is less depressed.

The Boston office of Lee, Higginson & Co. has been withdrawn from the New York Sub-Treasury for shipment to South America. The certified total of the amount to be forwarded there by tomorrow's steamship is $3,000,000.

New York Opens Fairly Steady.

The New York market opened with a fairly steady tone, but selling pressure soon developed and during the first fifteen minutes practically every issue showed a material setback. There was less liquidation in newly listed industrials, however. This caused the general tone to improve somewhat. Pressure still prevailed among traders. London influences were good. Over there the war is supposed to be more movements narrow. Less market attention is being given to the situation in the Balkans. American stocks made gains over New York parity. The dividend declaration was helpful to Chesapeake & Ohio in foreign markets. Canadian Pacific made a good showing abroad and copper got better support.

Early declines in New York were as follows: Amalgamated, ¼; Westinghouse, ¾; Northern Pacific, ⅝; Steel common, ⅝; Union, ⅛; Canadian Pacific, 2¾; American Sugar, ex-dividend, 1; Reading, ⅛; Chicago & Northwestern, ¾; Denver & Rio Grande, ¾; Lehigh Valley, ⅝; Studebaker, 2. U. S. Rubber opened unchanged, but soon gained ¼. Missouri Pacific was ⅝ higher, while Southern Pacific and Union Pacific were unchanged on first sales.

The Curb was dull and easy.

Brokers and a Higher Tax.

New York brokers, bankers and real estate men say that to double to $4 the transfer tax on stocks would have a disastrous effect upon the Wall Street district as regards realty values, deprive thousands of brokers' employees of a livelihood and curtail business on the New York Stock Exchange to such an extent that its members might have to use other cities as a basis for their transactions.

R. G. Forbes, junior partner of the New York American, says: "The professional stock traders who pay most of the tax are a very useful class of people. Their use is to them that we owe so ready a market for securities. When the tendency drifted into bankruptcy or into other fields, fluctuations in stocks would be extremely violent, for oftentimes the only market for a stock when there is not a single buying order on the slightest from the public, would need needed money in a hurry and had to dispose of a certain good but inactive stock. You give a price to the public. It is no floor trader ready to take it on his own account. The broker offers it at one price after another, until he finds one or other, but if no outside or public buying appears on the market the best established might easily be ruinous. At present there are traders on hand willing to buy anything offered for little if anything they will be able to sell when a demand arises."

Copper Goes Up in London.

The London copper market opened steady, with spot up 5s, and futures 2s, 9d, higher.

In speaking of the advance in the asking price of great producing interests from 14¾ to 15 cents a pound, it is said:

"Great caution is due in the case of a big speculative issue who had gone short of standard warrants and London metal market was one of the principal factors in bringing about the reaction. For since the buying of actual copper represented a ball and Pall Mall has been a great interest in standard warrants of varying proportions. As the issue is one of short selling on the London metal exchange was to depress the price of copper and thereby to cause the purchase of copper metal, which resulted in a rise in quotations from 11¾ cents to 14¾ cents.

"There has been much speculation in connection with the copper metal market in various ways during the last year or two, months, and transactions have been carried out on a large scale, not only in London, but on the continent of Europe, which of course has been reflected in copper from the United States and has naturally been responsible for much of the fluctuations in the producers' reports.

"While yesterday's recovery of ¾ cents is regarded as important as the earlier drop of 1¾ cents, it must not be forgotten that the latter was the result of a long and persistent bear campaign, which nothing but could then be uttered of a stable character. It has not been the intention of the consumers to refrain from buying so much on account of high prices as for the ordinary reason that the maintenance of a price which would ensure a fair return on the capital invested in manufactured material."

Present Mood of Brokers.

The present mood of New York brokers is reflected in this story: A trader was looking at the beautiful ceiling of the Exchange, which a fellow-member told him cost $200,000. "Two hundred thousand dollars on the ceiling," he said wearily, "but not a blamed cent on the floor."

"Smarter Than Harriman."

Howard K. Burras, prominent on Wall Street, relates this anecdote: "When I was an office boy getting $7 a week I met another boy, who asked me how it was I was getting $7 a week when he was getting only $6. 'Because I'm smarter than you,' I replied. That boy," mused Mr. Burras, "was Edward H. Harriman, which only goes to show you can't always tell, from where you sit, how far a cat is going to jump."

Financial News in Brief.

Chairman Frank Trumbull of the Chesapeake & Ohio board says: "The Chesapeake & Ohio will have no financing to do this year except for improvement requirements, as it has no other necessities that are not fixed in my way. The property is in excellent condition."

To evade the proposed increase in the tax on stock transactions some New York brokers advocate leasing an armory in Jersey City and moving the New York Stock Exchange across the Hudson. When Governor Sulzer was told this he remarked: "They will move when the moon falls."

Southern Pacific earned less than 8 per cent. on its $272,475,731 outstanding stocks during the year ended June 30, 1912, as against 9¾ per cent. in the previous year, according to the annual report issued yesterday. Adverse weather conditions, partial failure of crops and labor troubles were to blame.

Boston & Albany reports for the year ended December 31, 1912, gross, $16,241,704, an increase of $1,213,061; net, $4,455,432, an increase of $812,536; surplus after charges, $71,602, an increase of $726,783.

F. W. Woolworth Company reports for the year ended December 31, 1912, $5,414,-000, available for dividends, after payment of the 7 per cent. on the preferred stock there remained a balance equal to $7 per cent. on the $50,000,000 common stock.

Studebaker Corporation reports for the year ended December 31, 1912, surplus after all charges and depreciation, $2,333,-245, an increase of $926,660, and surplus after charges, $731,602, an increase of $726,783.

F. W. Woolworth Company reports for the year ended December 31, 1912, $5,414,000, available for dividends, after payment of the 7 per cent. on the preferred stock there remained a balance equal to $7 per cent. on the $50,000,000 common stock.

Thompson, Towle & Co. says: "Recent market proceedings have seemed to demonstrate that American Sugar common has liquidated to a standstill. The stock has for several months been around 115 per share, yielding at that price a shade better than 6 per cent. There is a possibility that publication of the company's annual statement next month may cause a further decline in the shares, but even that event has probably been pretty well taken care of."

The New York subtreasury gained $578,000 from the banks yesterday and since Friday have gained $8,011,000.

CASSIDY TELLS HOW CO-OPERATION REDUCES PRICE, RAISES QUALITY

Mr. Cassidy today discusses the enthusiastic meeting held at Faneuil Hall last night, under the auspices of the Housekeepers' League, to discuss the topic of "Co-operation."

The Housekeepers' League was created to conduct the crusade for twenty-four-cent eggs, which opened Mr. Cassidy's work for the AMERICAN. Mrs. Anna Steinauer, president of the league, and many of the members were present last night. Mr. Cassidy showed how simple co-operation of thesis among housewives can effect a tremendous saving from dients and frauds in food.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

It was a remarkable gathering of men and women—that at Faneuil Hall. They had gathered to discuss the question of co-operation. I don't proposed to know anything about such an economic problem. But I do know enthusiasm, and enthusiasm in a good cause, when I see it.

The audience last night was enthusiastic. The speakers were earnest, and what they had to say was listened to with the closest attention. The gathering was a sign of the times, I believe.

Co-operation was the topic discussed.

Rabbi Charles Fleischer presided—and Rabbi Fleischer has had some practical experience with attempted co-operative stores. John Graham Brooks, another expert, was a principal speaker, and Harry Phillips and Mrs. Owen Phillips took something of the remarkable success of the Rochdale co-operative system in England.

The things that were said are not so important. I believe that co-operation may help to offer the solution of the cost of living problem. But a greater question than cost is quality.

It is all very well to get your milk at eight cents a quart, if you can—but it is a great deal more important to get absolutely clean and healthful milk, no matter what the cost. Anyone, I believe, would choose sanitary milk at twelve cents, rather than germ-infected milk at eight cents. Before attempting any price cutting, I believe organizations of women should make it their business to secure actual purity of foods.

If I have pointed out that it is possible to secure pure food by the co-operative plan I have made my point again. It is possible to do it through co-operation.

Will Cut Grocery Bill.

Two speakers gave force to this question, as well as to the question of economy. They said not only, "Co-operation will cut your grocery bill," but they said, "Co-operation will cut your doctor's bill." Just as good as any large percentage of women begin to take an intelligent interest in pure foods—then the pure food fight is won.

It is not enough, however, to cry "We want pure food!" You must get your money's worth for pure food in the grocery with you. You must ask good grocery, when he offers you a product, "Is it pure?" If he says it is not—refuse to buy it. If he says it is—refuse to believe it unless you are sure he is deceiving you—then complain with your neighbors to drive him out of business, by refusing to patronize his store.

Co-operation is a mighty weapon. It is by co-operation that the chain stores can undersell their competitors. It is by co-operation that the trusts and the interested persons have amassed such great wealth. It is by the present laws on food questions—laws which in Massachusetts tend more to protect than to prohibit that the poisoned food is sold.

The retailers have beaten the consumers by co-operation. But just as soon as the consumers begin to co-operate—the retailers must come to terms.

For instance—suppose a retailer is selling a certain kind of catsup. Call it XXX catsup. I don't believe there is any such brand. If there is, I wish to apologize for using the name.

A woman comes into the store. She says, "Have you XXX catsup?"

"Yes."

"Don't it contain benzoate?"

"The label says so, ma'am."

"Then I don't want it. Give me some other brand."

Brings Pure Food.

The retailer would not be strongly affected by the first woman who did this. With the second, he would begin to take notice, with the third, he would be interested—and when twenty had said the same thing in a firm day—the XXX catsup would go off his shelves, never to return. That's business for him.

That's the way co-operation can bring pure food.

Professor John Graham Brooks, who has probably an international reputation as an authority on co-operation was the principal speaker. He said in part:

"We hear a great deal of the advantages of co-operation. I believe co-operation is a coming thing. It is true that there has been a failure to succeed. I believe the American people are being pinched. That is why success is in sight."

There were about 150 or 200 people at the meeting. At least half were women. Most of these were members forty years of almost unbroken failure in co-operative enterprises which have been inaugurated. But I rather like that record.

"There are two great reasons for the failure of co-operation in the past. In the first place, we have been in a growing nation, shunning the rich crops of the natural wealth of the country. This has given us the habit of wasting. We have become a nation of spendthrifts in the second place. There has been little to teach us the necessity of intensive cultivation of our land and other national resources.

"There has never been a successful co-operative store in Boston. We are not born through suffering. People pinched by poverty appear to be the only sort who can make co-operation of the Housekeepers' League, which arranged the meeting. Rabbi Charles Fleischer presided, and the speakers besides Professor Brooks were Harry Phillips, prominent in successful co-operation in England; William Hayhurst, secretary of the Co-operative Consumers' Co-operative Association of Springfield, Mass., and Mrs. Harry Phillips, who, with her husband, has been active in the co-operative work in England.

Commercial Manager C. A. Forster of the Maxwell Motor Company, spent yesterday in Boston as the guest of New England manager Ralph Coburn. Mr. Forster inspected the Maxwell plant and said that with the five New England cars sold by Coburn, he has the future prospects of the Maxwell in New England are decidedly bright.

The White Company of Boston announces an association with it of Wilcrop A. Stiles. Mr. Stiles has of late been connected with H. S. Notors in charge of the Goddard-Burton retail sales, and before that was sales and advertising manager for a prominent Philadelphia firm engaged in the manufacture of ignition apparatus.

A SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH
"Pape's Diapepsin" Regulates Your Stomach and Ends Indigestion in Five Minutes.
Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate lies like a lump of indigestion; if you have head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Diapepsin and in five minutes you truly will wonder what has become of indigestion and distress.
Millions of men and women today know that it is useless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.
If your stomach doesn't take care of your food limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help; remember, the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

WARNS AGAINST VETERANS' HOME WITH 2 INMATES

Department Commander George A. Hosley of the Massachusetts Grand Army has issued an official warning against contributing to the support of the Governor John A. Andrew Home for Civil War Veterans and Their Wives, at No. 19 Woodbine street, Roxbury.

It calls attention to the fact that only one veteran and his wife have been admitted at the home, which was dedicated with elaborate exercises early last December.

The warning lays emphasis on the alleged fact that the home is being conducted in an unbusinesslike manner and order is believed to be due to fictional trouble between the officers of the home. Each side has held grievances before Department Commander Hosley.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

The New Haven Is Too Eager; Massachusetts Herself Can Give the Hill Towns Trolleys if They Really Need Them

Last Sunday the AMERICAN published some vouchers endorsed by President Charles S. Mellen and Vice-President Storrs of the New Haven Railroad. These vouchers were memoranda of certain expenditures by the Berkshire Street Railway in behalf of a certain organization in Western Massachusetts called the Hill Towns Transit Association. Thereby hangs a tale.

Some years ago the New Haven Railroad began to feel severely the competition in Connecticut of the street railways. The New Haven directors foresaw that electricity was the coming motive power in transportation. Consequently the directors appointed a sub-committee of their board to investigate the question of trolley competition and to report their recommendations.

This committee investigated and reported, and the New Haven BEGAN ITS COURSE OF MONOPOLISTIC ACQUISITION of the competing trolley lines in Connecticut.

Then it began to acquire water power companies and gas and electric light companies. During the course of its monopolizing the entire public service business of Connecticut, it metamorphosed its entire corporate organization. It surrendered its railroad charter and, under its old name, changed itself to a mere holding company, in which the railroad proper is made to guarantee the profits of the other enterprises which have been purchased at excessive prices to complete the monopoly.

When the New Haven corporation had established the "peace of Warsaw" in Connecticut, it turned its attention to Rhode Island, and soon had the street railways of that State.

Massachusetts was now the next territory in the line of its aggrandizing advance. It first bought the trolleys of Massachusetts, contrary to our law and CONTRARY TO OUR ESTABLISHED PUBLIC POLICY.

When, after a struggle, we dispossessed it of any claim to the title of these street railways which it had seized, it asked the Commonwealth for permission to take the Berkshire Street Railway, promising great expenditures to upbuild that line and promising, WHAT WAS MORE IMPORTANT, that it would ask for no more trolleys in this State.

It was allowed to take the Berkshire Street Railway under these terms. Then, with shameless perfidy, within a year it began to conspire to seize all the trolleys from Berkshire to Worcester, which is more than half the area of the State.

IT OFFERED, AS A BRIBE, FIVE MILLIONS TO EXTEND THE LINES INTO SOME OF THE HILL TOWNS IF IT WAS GIVEN POSSESSION OF THE TROLLEYS IN THIS TERRITORY.

Then the Hill Towns Transit Association was organized and a pathetic prayer in behalf of the hill towns was written by some thrifty student of biblical style.

Stimulating doses of money were injected into the agitation of the hill towns in favor of giving the New Haven monopoly the possession of the trolleys in this, the larger part of Massachusetts. The Legislature was impressed with the enthusiasm and the activity of Western Massachusetts to be swallowed up in the maw of the New Haven monopoly.

The Legislature passed the Trolley Merger bill, which would have brought the New Haven within one bound of the Boston Elevated and the Bay State Street railways and would have given Massachusetts also the "peace of Warsaw."

But Governor Foss, who has been a director in public service corporations himself, was not so easily impressed with the idea of abandoning a salutary policy at the excited request of people stimulated by considerable doses of monopoly money. HE VETOED THE BILL.

This year the bill is again before the Legislature and will be duly reported by a subservient street railway committee. Perhaps the Legislature may not be so much impressed with the spontaneity of the popular demand in Western Massachusetts now that it is known whence part of the stimulant came.

In any event, the same Governor has the same power to veto the same bill. If he is the SAME MAN THIS YEAR, he will veto that bill as he vetoed it last year and the people of Massachusetts will accord him the same praise that they accorded him last year.

There IS a way for the hill towns to obtain the development which they say they want and which they may need. But that way is not by the grace of the New Haven. The people of Western Massachusetts ought to beware of the New Haven "bearing gifts."

There is no reason why the Commonwealth of Massachusetts cannot provide for a needed extension of trolleys into these hill towns, if she can provide for the development of the port of Boston or for numerous other improvements which may not be any more needed or more helpful than the development of these hill towns.

LET THE HILL TOWNS DEMAND THIS HELP FROM THE STATE and they will not demand too much.

But let them not ask for the fatal surrender of a great, salutary State policy, which commands the separation of the steam railroads and the trolleys, that the competition between them may help to give the State better transportation service from both.

How the Devil Works

The good people of earth could have the world running smoothly, justly, happily, if they were as much in earnest and as systematic and persistent as His Satanic Majesty

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

THE decade before 1912 had been a busy and successful one for the Devil. He had organized several new trusts, raised the prices of food, fuel, clothing and rents, and kept the average wage of the working girl down to six dollars a week.

Everything had moved satisfactorily in his Central Office and in his branch station on earth.

His emissaries had created false standards of life, and men and women in high circles had grown money mad.

Wasteful extravagance, unhealthful excitement, unnatural appetites, and an utter disregard of the rights of others characterized the financial and social world.

Then came the rumors to the Central Office of great unrest among the people. They were waking, they were thinking.

Labor unions, co-operative associations, single tax organizations were becoming alive and active.

The Devil was at once alert and on the defensive.

He read over the reports sent in from earth, and was concerned as he noted the growing tendency of the modern reformer to say little of the rewards awaiting the toiler in heaven, and much of the rights of each toiler to an acre of earth and free sunlight and air, and of the turning of the minds of the world's workers back toward nature and the simple life.

"This will never do—It will never do," quoth he. "Before the working people become inoculated with this wholesome doctrine we must busy ourselves. We must stimulate their tastes for more of the joys of earth."

So the Devil arrayed himself in evening dress, and he sallied forth to make calls upon the working girls in the tenements.

Wherever he went he talked of the theatre, the opera, the cabarets, the gay motor rides to road houses; the shimmer of silken gowns; the gleam of jewels, and the pity of letting youth pass with none of these pleasures.

Then he made memoranda of the girls' wages—six dollars a week—and below he placed a little item of three dollars a week which a friend would gladly contribute to increase her income for awhile, and later on she could pay him back. Then, leaving her to think it over, the Devil went his way smiling.

And his smile was one of irony, thinking how easily the good people of earth could have the world running smoothly, justly, happily, with peaceful homes, wholesome food, healthful, well-paid toil, and time enough and money enough for pleasure and repose, if they were as much in earnest and as systematic and persistent as he, the Devil, had been in his own affairs.

This Year May Hold Everything for You

Therefore, Put Your Best Foot Forward and Struggle to the Top

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Copyright, 1912, by the Star Company.

THIS is a most inspiring year.

No matter what your position, or your environment, it should thrill you with the thought of what may be coming to you.

If you are poor, and worried over financial matters, there is the wonderful possibility of some great good fortune lying hidden in this New Year.

And if you can come into consciousness of your own power to make fortune smile on you, then the possibility will be a probability. If you are ill, good health may be the gift the year holds for you; and if your condition is beyond hope of restoration to health in this body, then you have that most wonderful of all hopes—passing into higher planes, and discovering the Great Secret of Life Beyond. He who accustoms himself to that thought, and meditates upon its full meaning, will learn to anticipate it as the most glorious of all experiences: an experience coming to each one of us in time; and this thought should make us all feel very tenderly toward one another as we pass along the Highway leading to the Universal Goal.

Today is a milestone on the journey; and we should make it also a headstone for the grave wherein we bury all grudges.

Do not let the sun set without having said "Peace and Good Will to ALL MEN," including foes and enemies, and those for whom you feel dislike.

It is not always easy to overcome your dislikes in a day. Some people call forth no other sentiment from the hearts of men; yet if you can think of such individuals as fellow pilgrims like yourself, coming from the same Source and seeking the same goal, and seeking in their own mistaken way the road to happiness, you can awaken pity in your heart for them; and when pity has entered you will find you no longer dislike them.

It is a great victory to overcome a dislike

And it means greater power for your mind, and body.

Dislike is a destructive form of thought force; and does no good.

It takes from your strength, the strength which you need to use in constructive ways.

If you cannot at once drive all dislike from your heart, at least forget it for this one day.

Think only of pleasant things.

Speak only pleasant words, and refuse to talk of disagreeable and painful subjects.

Say over the words, LOVE, OPULENCE, HEALTH, POWER, PEACE, PLENTY, several times when any undesired thought attempts to enter your mind.

There is marvelous power in WORDS.

God said, Let there be Light; and there was light.

And so will there be love, and peace, and power, and plenty in our lives if we say the words again and yet again.

Put your mind in a receptive state; and expect your heart's desire to come to you. Resolve to make progress in your chosen line of endeavor; to grow in character; to improve in personal appearance; to learn some new useful thing; and to develop new powers.

Resolve to bring out the best in every one you encounter. This can only be done by forgetting your own personal affairs for the time being, and by entering into the lives of those you meet, with a feeling of sympathy and interest.

Talk of health, and prosperity, and good deeds, and noble lives. Toss disagreeable subjects into the ash heap of the past. And let Time trundle them away with the other rubbish.

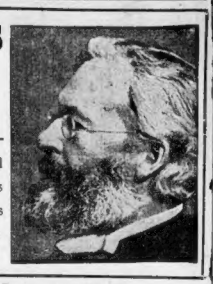
Agricultural Science—Dreaded Bacteria Used as Fertilizer Generates Nitrogen and Turns Barren Land Into Highly Productive Soil.



Written for the Boston American by

BY DR. C. H. PARKHURST

EVERYTHING has its uses.

What we call nuisances, such as snakes, mosquitoes, and lice, are useful things, but whose usefulness we have not yet succeeded in discovering. Science interrogates them and finds what they are good for.

Agricultural science is now turning to good account little microscopic objects in nature known as bacteria. It has found what they can do, has caught them and set them to work producing forage and kitchen vegetables. They do not know that they are working and render all the better service for that very reason.

Some of our readers know all about this, some do not. Even all those who are raising crops do not, for they are rather a conservative class and do not always take kindly to new ideas and methods.

They all know this, at any rate—that soil that has in it no nitrogen, no potash, and no phosphorus—particularly nitrogen—is unproductive. And nitrogen is expensive, the most so of any fertilizer when purchased in the market.

Now these little bacteria make nitrogen, and the beauty of the arrangement is that they work for nothing.

Bacteria as Nitrogen Makers Rival Efforts of Scientists

When I say that they make nitrogen I mean it in the sense in which oysters make pearls, or in which rainmakers, if there are any such people, make rain. They do not manufacture rain, but merely draw it down out of the sky. So these bacteria do not literally make nitrogen, they extract it from the atmosphere and lodge it upon the roots of clover, alfalfa, peas and beans in the shape of nodules that fasten to the roots and feed them; so that if, before planting, the clover seeds or beans are mixed with the proper variety of bacteria, the seeds will come up and flourish even though planted in meal or sawdust or even sand.

The reason why, under ordinary circumstances, soil becomes less and less productive is that the nitrogen that is in it becomes more and more exhausted by each successive crop that is raised upon it. That is where these little creatures come into play.

In a considerate way, although not knowing that they are coöperating, they make good to the soil what the previous crop takes out of it, and under certain conditions even more than make good, so that the transaction of raising a crop shows a credit balance, enriches the soil instead of impoverishing it, thus solving what is so serious a problem—that of keeping the soil up to a permanent condition of productiveness.

$2 Worth of Bacteria Will Nitrogenize an Acre

And bacteria are cheap, too. I am told that $2 worth of them will nitrogenize an acre.

I have a dozen letters in my possession, written from all parts of the country, showing what this method of fertilization will accomplish. They are almost enough to make one want to quit the city and go into agriculture.

One of these letters I give entire, showing that acid soil requires to be liberally overspread with lime and that by "inoculated" the writer means mixed with bacteria. This one is expressive of the same sentiment as the rest and is selected in preference to the others because more detailed in its statements and emanating from one whose agricultural experience enables him to speak with authority.

"Louisiana State University, College of Agriculture and Agricultural Experiment Stations.

"Some time ago I wrote you stating that I would send you results of my alfalfa experiments as soon as I obtained the data. In North Louisiana, in the hill region, an acre was planted which gave excellent results. The results of this plot are as follows:

"Plot No. 1.—One-quarter acre, inoculated and limed at the rate of 2,500 pounds to the acre, gave a yield for four cuttings at the rate of 6,004 pounds per acre.

Plant Pathologist Tells Amazing Results of Experiments

"Plot No. 2.—One-quarter acre, limed, but not inoculated, gave at the rate of 360 pounds per acre.

"Plot No. 3.—One-quarter acre, inoculated, but not limed, gave at the rate of 350 pounds per acre.

"Plot No. 4.—One-quarter acre, not limed, not inoculated, gave at the rate of 720 pounds per acre.

(Signed) "C. W. EDGERTON, Plant Pathologist."

If the facts are all that this letter implies—and they all tell the same story and come from places as widely scattered as Massachusetts, Georgia, Kansas, New Jersey, North Dakota, Pennsylvania, Montana, North Carolina, etc.—then there is offered in these highly-bred bacteria and in the newly-discovered mode of their transplantation reasons for anticipating the communication of a new impetus to agricultural industry and such an augmentation of agricultural efficiency as will increase the product and reduce its expense.

To My Poet Pard—Joaquin Miller

GOOD-BYE, old poet pard and friend,
There's one who knows and understands
The soul where soulful solos blend
With sonnets of the borderland.
Hermit, but not alone were you;
The children of your fertile brain,
Were ever with you, ever true,
In Clouds, in Sunshine, or in Rain.

"Unknown" is written on your tomb.
Unknown, but you are known to one
Who met you in God's ante-room,
Who said: "Thy will, not mine, be done."
Dear pard, I believe, as believe I must,
That tired broncho souls like you,
Who write and sing—In God we trust—
Will find it rich beyond the blue.
